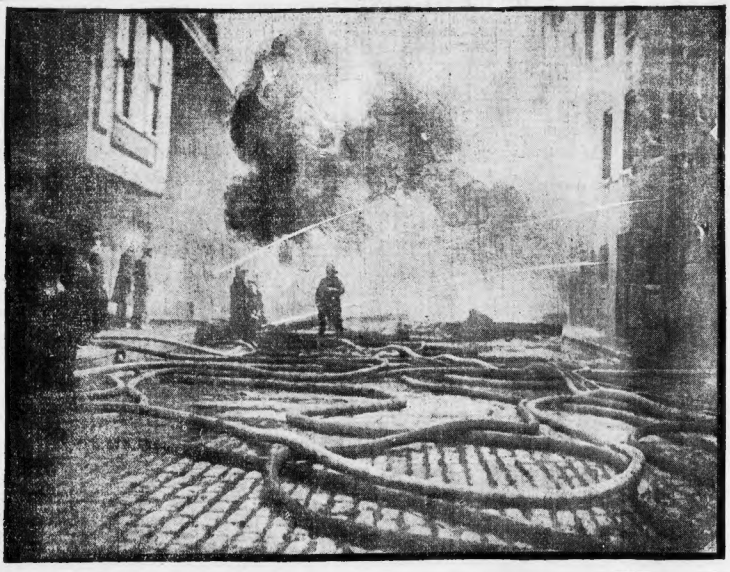
BUILDING BLOWN UP

MANY KILLED AND INJURED

"L" STRUCTURE AFIRE; SHIPPING IN PERIL

FIREMEN FIGHTING OIL-FED FLAMES IN ATLANTIC AVENUE



Blazing Oil Thrown Into Street, Setting Horses and Men on Fire—Ships Are Warped from Docks in Time.

Two men killed, two missing, at least 25 injured, four horses killed and seventeen so badly burned that ten had to be shot, are results of a fire that followed a terrific explosion of guncotton in the building at No. 244 Atlantic avenue shortly after 10 o'clock to-day.

The property loss will be about $100,000.

The force of the explosion was such that it wrecked the three and a half story structure, which in a moment burst into a roaring blaze as though kindling wood. The building was occupied by the firm of Howe, French & Co.

The flames shot out of the building, caught that occupied by the Commonwealth Oil Company adjoining, wrapped themselves about the elevated structure until it was ablaze, and reached out toward the many ships that lay tied up about Central and other wharves.

Covered by Flaming Oil.

More than a score of men with teams were at the wharf loading their wagons or driving along. The explosion blew them in several instances from their seats and burned them severely. Oil from the building was blown out, covering the men and horses. The latter were burned until their bodies were singed and their flesh blistered. Men with clothing in flames ran frantically through the street, their rush serving to fan the blaze.

Policemen, in an endeavor to reach them and help extinguish the flames, ran wildly in pursuit, as did others who had not been victims of the catastrophe. The wildest excitement prevailed, which was increased by the clang of the ambulances from all of the hospitals and the rattle of the patrol wagons.

Steamers Flee Flames.

It was recognized at once that a fearful disaster might occur, as the entire block is full of highly inflammable material. The ships hurriedly began their exit from the docks. Fragments of burning material fell in showers on them and men stood ready to fight flames that threatened them.

The steamer Tuscan, which runs between Philadelphia and Boston, got away quickly. The Cape Ann of the Gloucester line and the Herman Winter of the Metropolitan line, which were lying beside the blazing structure, hurriedly fled for open water. Several steam lighters, laden with cotton, caught fire, and the greatest difficulty was met in fighting the flames on the boats.

Three alarms were sent in for the fire, the third following just after the first. Engines dashed to the scene and soon thirty streams of water were playing on the conflagration from every available direction. A great crowd gathered and the police who hurried to the scene had a hard time in establishing their lines.

MEN FLEE LIKE BLAZING TORCHES.

All of those in the blazing structures who were able reached the street in a state of terror. It was thought at first that E. G. Gerrish, proprietor of the Commonwealth Oil Company, had perished. He followed George Derres of No. 12 Dana street, Roxbury, from the structure. Derres looked for Gerrish and could not find him. He though that he had not got out. Later it was found that Gerrish ran up Atlantic avenue like a blazing torch.

The drivers of the many wagons, many of them dazed and burned, and their horses, also maimed and burned, were pitiable objects. The drivers knew hardly more than the horses they drove what had happened. Knocked from their wagons or to the ground if they were standing by their trucks, the men got up blindly and ran about with their clothes afire and top heavy loads to put out the blaze.

One of these men was John D. Sidney. His wagon and load were for a moment enveloped in a burst of flame. When he emerged he was burned about the face and hands so that he was in agony. His horses snorted and neighed in pain and dashed about on the peril of the already injured drivers and helpers.

FIRE TONGUES LEAP STREET.

Another man who was hurled from his wagon as though he had been a bit of straw in a gale was Edward Burke of Chel-

JOHN D. GIVES $200,000 TO HUB BAPTISTS

Sends Check for $125,000, Offers $75,000 More to Missionary Board.

A check for $125,000 has just been received at the headquarters of the American Baptist Missionary Union in the Ford building from John D. Rockefeller. Mr. Rockefeller is to give the union 75,000 more which he will pay as soon as Treasurer Charles W. Perkins requests that it be forwarded.

Last year Mr. Rockefeller gave the union $200,000, and the year before he contributed a similar amount.

Mr. Rockefeller's gift to the union was no recent venture, before he even thought of being an oil magnate and for several years he has been learning each year how much the organization will require for its work and has been donating the sum asked for.

"Of Mr. Rockefeller's latest $200,000 contribution," Treasurer Perkins said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day, "$125,000 will be devoted to general work and the remaining $75,000 towards the securing of land erection of buildings in foreign countries."

ses. His wagon was piled high with boxes of shoes. So fierce did the flames beat upon the head of inflammable material that the goods were soon ablaze.

In the neighborhood were bales of cotton that were soon slowly burning to ashes. Across Atlantic avenue the flames shot. Nothing was set afire, but the hotel tongues darted in through open doors and scorched some of the inmates. Men dashed out of their offices and ran about like mad men.

KNOCKED DOWN BY BLAST.

Superintendent of Engines Byrnington of the marine department had been on a tour of inspection. He was a hundred feet from the scene of the explosion. The flames were belched against him as though from the crater of a volcano. He fell to the ground and when he was able to arise his face and head had been severely burned. He was cared for at the naval medical office.

More than 200 feet away stood William Hardy of No. 8 Archibald place. He was in what they fought it.

knocked down. He thought he had felt the shock of an earthquake. He was not burned.

A teamster named Hyman Behman, as well as his horses, were hurt. His hair and mustache were burned.

The numbers of the buildings injured and endangered on Central wharf and the names of their occupants are as follows:

No. 33—Vacant.

No. 34—Howe, French & Co., paints and oils.

No. 35—Commonwealth Oil Company, lubricating oils.

No. 36—Boume, Seymour & Co., refining oils.

No. 37—Mellin's Food Company; not damaged.

Nos. 38-39—Fronting on Atlantic avenue occupied by Hub Awning Company and other small concerns; not damaged.

Just an hour after the firemen reached the scene the blaze was completely extinguished with which they attacked the raging flames saved the fire from spreading to the neighborhood, it is believed. The fire was checked great credit for the way they tackled the fire and the able manner

EYE-WITNESSES' STORIES OF FIRE

Arthur Eliot of Hoyt's Express Company, who was driving along Atlantic avenue when the fire broke out, said:

"I saw a little smoke, and before I could decide where the fire was there was a terrific explosion which blew over piles of freight and knocked several people off their feet. John McCarthy, who was on the wharf, was blown overboard, but was rescued before the firemen arrived. The heat was so intense that I had to hurry away from where I was standing when the explosion occurred."

D. J. Teehan, who has a small store opposite the burning buildings, says that he saw the smoke, but did not realize that there was a fire until he heard the explosion.

"I think dozens of people must have been injured," Mr. Teehan told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "Horses and teams were knocked down and believe that several must have been blown into the water. The smoke became so suffocate within five minutes that I was forced to leave the door of my store."

Burned on Express Wagon.

George M. Durant and Stephen L. Harris, who were badly burned about the face and hands, were sitting on one of Day's Newburyport express wagons in front of Howe, French & Co.'s building when the explosion occurred.

"Our clothes were blown off the seat," said Durant, "and within a second our clothing was on fire. The flames burned the hair off our knees, crashed the shoes and socks, clothing blazing and that was the last I saw of my clothes. We managed to extinguish the fire on our own clothing, but in doing so burned our hands, and our faces were scorched.

"As soon as we realized that our own lives were safe we led the horse into the street and helped put out the fire, which was blazing fiercely on the wagon.

Horse Badly Burned.

"The horse was severely burned, but will not have to be killed."

Among the persons who lost horses were J. S. Hilliard & Sons, hackers in the fight against the striking teamsters; S. A. Freeman & Co., the Newburyport Express Company and the Bangor dividend of the Eastern Steamship Company.

Two horses, suffering great agony, lay upon the ground.

The owner brought Angell to shoot them.

"I can't do it," he said, "until I get the permission of their owners."

The owners could not be found.

"Have you your position give you authority to shoot them?" asked Commissioner Angell.

"No," said Angell.

"Then I will your course humanity I'm going to resign from your society," said the Fire Commissioner.

Urged to Kill Horses.

The crowd hooted Angell and called upon him to kill the horses. The Representatives of the humane society added their entreaties to those of the crowd, but Angell would take no chances.

Then the shot ten of the horses whose agony seemed to be greater than that endured by the horses in front of the wagons to which they were attached were much damaged by the flames.

HELPLESS HORSES TORTURED BY FIRE

One of the most disturbing features of the fire was the tortures which was inflicted upon the horses which were attacked by the flames as they stood in different districts sheds where teams were being loaded or unloaded.

There were more than thirty teams there when the fire broke out. Within as few minutes most of the horses had been roped in and were helpless to escape.

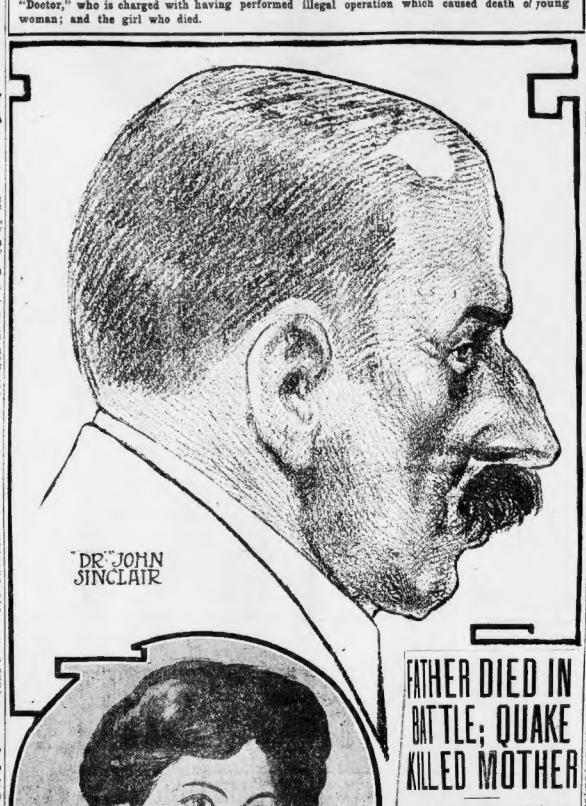
That cries were heard, if in some instances and the fire inflicted terrible suffering among them is certain.

Superintendent George T. Angell of the S. P. C. A., reached the scene a few minutes after the fire broke out and with his agents superintended the removal to veterinary hospitals of those horses that could be rescued with any hope that they would survive.

While this work was going on there was a serious clash between superintendent Angell on one side and Fire Commissioner Benjamin W. Wells, Representative W. L. Newton and Councilman Colpoys upon the other.

ON TRIAL FOURTH TIME FOR GIRL'S DEATH.

"Doctor," who is charged with having performed illegal operation which caused death of young woman; and the girl who died.



"DR." JOHN SINCLAIR

ANNIE RUSSELL

DR. SINCLAIR ACTING AS HIS OWN LAWYER

Physician Accused of Causing Girl's Death Faces Court for Fourth Time.

JURY CHOSEN, CASE IS ON

When the fourth trial of Dr. John E. Sinclair, charged with causing the death of Miss Annie Russell of Charlestown, was begun in the Superior Criminal Court today, Attorney Clarence W. Rowley, who has fought for the defendant through three trials, dropped out of the case, giving later as his reason that he and the defendant disagreed as to the best methods of procedure and also that "there was no money in the case."

Just after the first witness was called there were conferences between Sinclair and Rowley, between Rowley and Judge Brown, and then between Rowley and Assistant District Attorney Michael F. Dwyer, who is prosecuting the case. Then Rowley walked out of the courtroom. To the newspapermen he said:

Counsel Withdraws.

"I have withdrawn from the case voluntarily. It is merely a difference of opinion between Dr. Sinclair and me in reference to the mode of procedure. I contended the case ought to be fought right though on technicalities. But he insisted not. Also, there is no money in it. I was engaged by Sinclair on April 23, 1906, spent practically all my time since on it, and secured two disagreements in three trials. Part of my bills for services have been paid. Dr. Sinclair will conduct his own case, cross-examine witnesses and plead to the jury. I understand he has had a legal training."

The courtroom was jammed when the case was called to-day. The clerk read the names of the jurors and told Sinclair he could object to two. Sinclair leaned forward, carefully scanned the face of every juror and said: "Your Honor, these are good men."

After the conferences and the withdrawal of Rowley from the case, Dr. Joseph H. Lynch, the physician who attended Miss Russell at her home prior to her going to the Relief Hospital, was called as the first witness.

Tried to Bribe Jury.

Dr. John Sinclair, alias Aaron Burr, formerly lived at No. 161 West Springfield street. In March 8, 1906, he was indicted by the Grand Jury on the charge of illegally operating on Miss Annie Russell of No. 40 Pliesant street, Charlestown, who had died in the Relief Hospital on February 4 preceding. Sinclair's first trial was in June. The jury disagreed. At the August term a second trial closed abruptly. Juror Alfred M. Greene, colored, of No. 40 Village street, told Judge Harris an attempt had been made to bribe him. Dr. Alfred M. Clarke, witness for the government, was arrested on charge of having attempted to influence a juror and was sent to the House of Correction for two years. William Washington and Joseph Roe, both colored, who were arrested for contempt of court, were fined $50 apiece.

The third trial took place last September, and ended in a disagreement. Important witnesses against him were Clarke, who was brought from the House of Correction to testify against him, and Miss Mabel Lynch, the physician's office girl. Extraordinary precautions were taken to guard the jury during the third trial.

On October 31 last Sinclair was sentenced by Judge Bond to State prison for not less than one nor more than ten years. He counsel filed exception with the Supreme Court, preparatory for a new trial. A new trial was granted, which was begun to-day. This makes the fourth time Dr. Sinclair has faced a jury.

FATHER DIED IN BATTLE; QUAKE KILLED MOTHER

Passengers on a train which is carrying her to Wyoming, whence they will be given homes on sheep ranches, are three children, all under sixteen years old, who have had more than their share of misfortune. Their father, Alfred Walker, was killed at the siege of Ladysmith during the Boer war, and their mother, Mrs. Minnie Walker, met death in the Kingston earthquake.

Without a dollar in the world, the children, Alfred, aged fifteen; Cassie, fourteen, and Harry, eleven, were destined to become public charges until their grandmother, Mrs. Attalise Allen of Kingston, a town with two of their sisters, Mrs. E. B. Godicke and Mrs. Alice Putney, to provide for them on their wandering quest.

The children were sent by Boston on the train with Forrest Farragut, and after they had scored some warm clothing here were placed on a train bound for Wyoming.

"On in the West we hope in time to forget the horrors of the days when we was killed in Kingston," the elder boy, old in a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "Had we remained in Kingston I do not know what might have become of us. We had no money, our great-aunt was too poor to look after us, and we could not secure employment.

"AMERICAN GEISHA" IS NEW WAR PLAY

WORCESTER, April 16.—"An American Geisha," a new play by Will A. Page, adapted from Archibald Clavering Gunter's latest novel, had its first presentation on any stage at the Worcester Theatre last night with Miss Florence Reed in the title role.

The play is an ambitious military melodrama of a high order, and can be compared in some respects to William Gillette's war play, "Secret Service." The scenes are laid in Japan and Manchuria before and during the war between Japan and Russia.

4 CITIES LOST; 500 DIE IN QUAKE; VOLCANO RAGING

Widespread Disaster Accompanies Earth Throes in Mexico—Inhabitants in Panic.

MEXICO CITY, April 16.—Advices received at the office of the Mexican Central railway here to-day state that Colima, the old volcano in the State of Colima, has been violently active for the past three days. This fact and the earthquake which shook this city and a number of the southern States yesterday and the day before, are significantly connected here. Natives are said to be fleeing in terror from Colima valley for fear that they will be destroyed in a downpour of lava.

Additional advices from southern points increase the estimate of the disaster wrought by the earthquake.

More Than 500 Killed.

Confirmatory advices received at the office of the Mexican Central Railway show that the first estimates of 500 persons dead may be below the actual number. Telegraphic reports to the National Bank of Mexico yesterday fix the number killed in the cities of Chilpanotago and Chilapa alone at 500. To-day's reports add the city of Tixtala to the list of destroyed towns. An unconfirmed report says that the city of Atlixco has also been levelled.

Thousands upon thousands are homeless. The four cities named seem to have felt the full force of the shock, but the disturbance was not confined to these quarters, and throughout the States of Guerrero, Colima, Michoacan, Mexico Puebla and even in portions of the federal district the destruction is large.

The entire affected region, however, is subject to volcanic and seismic disturbances.

Reports made to federal authorities here to-day show that several large prospecting parties of Americans were in the interior of the State of Michoacan.

Living in the Open.

The inhabitants of the stricken districts are living in the open and urgent appeals have been made to the federal authorities for tents and supplies.

In this city the shocks were sufficiently severe to shake buildings violently, and hundreds fled to the adjoining hills in panic.

The Governor of Guerrero has dispatched military engineers and troops to the disturbed district and the work of rescue and sanitation has begun.

Telegraphic reports everywhere, and people are fleeing to the open country. The earth continues to rock at half-hour intervals, and many minor shocks are completing the work of destruction of the first earthquake.

RUSSIA LEAVES CHINA ON DATE SET IN TREATY

ST. PETERSBURG, April 16.—The expiration of the eighteen months' limit for the evacuation of Manchuria by the Russian and Japanese troops was marked by the demolition yesterday of Russian fortifications at Kirin and Tsitsihar, the first two towns in Manchuria to pass from Russian hands to the Chinese civil administration.

The evacuation by the Russian troops was completed March 21, almost a month ahead of the specified date.

An official of the foreign office to-day said:

"It is a complete justification of Russia's good faith in fulfilling the treaty. It was instituted when the treaty was signed that Russia never would abandon Manchuria, but would find some means of evading her obligations. But the expiration of the stipulated period finds not a single soldier of the Russian military establishment left in Manchuria.

STEAMER SINKS, ONLY THREE SAVED

GIBRALTAR, April 16.—The British steamer Andalusia, from Swansea for Barcelona, foundered April 11 off the Spanish coast. Her captain, first officer and sailor were the only ones saved.

MRS. M'LEAN 'JOLLIES' HER D. A. R. CRITICS

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The Daughters of the American Revolution to-day settled down to real congressional work and politics. Mrs. Donald McLean, president-general of the very first thing tried to put a kink in the attack upon her financial administration by "jollying" her critics.

Her arch enemies to-day were reviving their cause and all hands were busy lining up the delegates for McLean and anti-McLean slates, preparatory to the election on Thursday. The strong personality of Mrs. McLean has made her fearless friends and bitter enemies.

While the daughters consider the proceedings in Continental Hall as the most important centre of attraction in the world to-day, they concede that New York comes a close second. There to-day Richmond Pearson Hobson, fittingly accompanied by a delegation of daughters from New York, presented to the arbitration and peace congress a set of resolutions adopted by the daughters in behalf of universal peace.

Several meetings of State delegations have been called for this to-day. At these State regents and State vice-regents will be elected. Among those to hold meetings are New Hampshire, Illinois, Vermont and New York.

5 DEAD, 20 HURT IN TRAIN CRASH

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 16.—Running at a speed of forty miles an hour on a straight track, the Great Northern west-bound Oriental Limited, which left here for Pacific Coast points Sunday morning, was derailed yesterday at Bartlett, N. D. Five persons, all members of the crew, were killed, and a score or more injured, some of them seriously.

After the wreck a gas tank exploded and the train took fire, seven passengers being destroyed. The sleeper and observation car escaped the flames. It is said to be upon evidence that the rails had been tampered with.

SERVANT GIRL FOUND DEAD; BLEW OUT GAS

With gas pouring from a half-open jet and with the windows tightly closed, Dorcas Duggan, a servant, was found dead in bed at No. 19 Gaston street, Roxbury, to-day. The girl, who is in this country but a few days and was not familiar with the working of gas lights.

PLAN TO RUN NEW HAVEN BY ELECTRICITY

Equipment of Whole System Depends on Experiments With Economical Motor.

FOR HUB-GOTHAM SERVICE

PROVIDENCE, April 16.—"If the experimental equipment of the section of the main road of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad between Stamford, Conn., and New York, which will be put into operation about June 1, is a success it will mean the adoption of an electrical equipment of the entire system of this road throughout New England."

This statement was made by Vice-President E. G. Buckland at the meeting of the East Providence Business Men's Association last evening.

"Upon the success of the Stamford section experiment also depends whether the tunnel in this city is operated by electricity or steam, continued Mr. Buckland.

"The direct current which has heretofore been used for the propelling of locomotives and cars was far too expensive for the operation of a main road, and so for economic reasons we have installed an alternating current system between Stamford, Ct., and New York, with a voltage of 11,000, which we expect to have in operation by the first of June.

"As soon as it is demonstrated without any question that the section between Stamford and New York is a success, the section from Stamford to New Haven will be equipped, and then the electrical equipment will be further extended until the entire road from New York to Boston is thus operated.

"Whether this will prove to be the method that will be employed is not yet known, but the Providence, Warren and Fall River branch, which is now being successfully operated by electricity, will be continued by that system."

HOUSE, 184-16, TOLLS KNELL OF BUCKET SHOPS

When the House of Representatives got around to taking a vote on the bucketshop bill, late yesterday, only sixteen Representatives—eleven of them Republicans—voted against a third reading. One hundred and eighty-four "ayes" were tallied against them, and the antigambling bill, loomed by the Watch and Ward Society of New England and prayed for by Christian Endeavorers, will receive a third reading and go to enactment to-day. It will then go to the Senate. It will probably be in the hands of the Governor late this week or early next week.

Among those voting for and feeling of Boston, Gauthier and Doyle of New Bedford, Alley of Brockton, Hirst of Milford, Coffin of West Newbury, Fogg of Newburyport, Osborne of Auburn, Meyer of Cambridge, Morse and Trudel of Fitchburg. All Members of Worcester and Lawrence delegation were the sixteen who voted against a third reading.

The killing of a similar bill in the House of last year, after it has been passed by the Senate, gave rise to the dismal stories of "tall dark stranger," other stories of alleged bundles of money and an investigation by the Committee on Rules. Representative who dissented from the favorable report.

The bill was handled for the committee by Representative John J. Higgins of Somerville, who touched gaily on the scandal of a year ago, impressed upon the House the fact that the bill hits everybody, big and little, high and low, who does any form of bucket shopping, and insisted that, enacted into law, it will put an end to gambling on the rise or fall of "the market."

VICTOR IN DUEL FOR GIRL'S LOVE KILLS HIMSELF

NEW YORK, April 16.—Friends until they both fell in love with the same girl, Vincenzo Cica and Ruca Piandiano fought a duel in Ocean Park, L. I., to-day, and as a result both are dead. Piandiano was killed by a bullet from Cica's gun. Then Cica committed suicide beside the body of his former friend.

Both men met at the girl's house last night and each resented the presence of the other. They went to the park and had a fist fight, but neither got the better of it. They met again several hours later and each pulled his revolver and opened fire. Cica was the quicker and Piandiano fell dead.

3 MOTHERLESS LITTLE ONES SENT TO HOME

Three children whose mother is dead and whose father has paid no attention to them since his release from State's prison, were arraigned before Judge Fallon in the South Boston Municipal Court to-day.

They are Ruth Hamilton, eleven years old, her sister Margaret, and their brother, George, aged six.

Agent Mann of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children found them without food and clothing and at the suggestion of Agent Mann, Judge Fallon committed them to the Harrison Avenue Home for Destitute Catholic Children. Their aunt, with whom they had been living, said she could care for them no longer.

'Will Stand by Mother,' Cries June Dickinson; 'She Needs My Help'

DAUGHTER OF WOMAN TRIED FOR COMPLICITY IN HUSBAND 'S DEATH IS LOYAL.

HOULTON, Me., April 16.—With pale face and furtive look, Mrs. Annie Dickinson entered the court house to-day, where she had seen the bullet-pierced skull of her husband, only to shriek out and fall back in terror at the reminder of the grim tragedy in her home which she is charged with having plotted to bring about.

The same terror-inspiring exhibit was brought into the court room to-day when the trial of the woman was resumed. In the gray and grinning skull is a great jagged hole showing where a bullet crashed into the brain of the man as he sat before the fire in the quiet and supposed security of his home.

No man saw the assassin who fired the fatal shot. It came through a window and was aimed with unerring accuracy. John B. Roberts, who was an acquaintance of Mrs. Dickinson, is also on trial for the same crime. The prosecution will try to prove that it was he who did the shooting.

Her head bowed in her arms, her shoulders heaving with emotion, Mrs. Annie Dickinson, charged with aiding in the murder of her husband, listened for an hour to the merciless address of the county prosecutor, listened to words that must have burned into her tortured soul, heard, but did not see with her eyes that the skull of her husband was being held up before the gaze of the twelve jurymen.

Such a scene Aroostook County has never seen before in its court trials. Before a crowded court room, the dramatic arraignment took place. Before that crowd Mrs. Annie Dickinson bent her head and wept, while beside her, the sallow-faced John Roberts, the Mexican accused of shooting Dickinson, moistened his lips and drew his jaws together with terrific snaps.

The two were in the same pen, so near that their shoulders touched, but they never had a word for each other and neither glanced in the other's direction. Until there came from the gray-haired, gray bearded coroner the story of the dread scene that he found in the Dickinson house on the morning of October 18 last both had intently gazed at the witnesses.

GAVE WAY FOR FIRST TIME.

Then it was that Mrs. Dickinson gave way for the first time to her emotions. When her head drooped on her arm, resting on the side of the small pen, she never raised it again until the crowd had gone from the court room and the deputy sheriff had touched her on the arm to tell her that it was time to take the journey across the yard again to the jail, where she has been confined since last Thursday night.

DENUNCIATION SCATHING.

This is what Mrs. Dickinson heard when the County Attorney, Eugene A. Holmes, arose to address the jury—just a few of the scathing denunciations that his quiet, penetrating voice hurled at her:

"There are several facts which we will prove to you from the stand, which are consistent with no other hypothesis than that Jack Roberts and Annie Dickinson are the murderers of J. Edgar Dickinson.

"And thereafter, gentlemen, there existed a condition of affairs which became known to this Christian neighborhood and which was an open scandal for months to the good people of Sprague Mills. As surely as the magnet attracts the needle, did the Mexican, Jack Roberts, become a source of fatally irresistible and fatally attractive evil to the misguided wife of J. Edgar Dickinson.

"We shall prove to you that Mrs. Dickinson left her home in the morning and walked a distance of five miles for the purpose of having one hour in Roberts's company. We shall prove to you that there were secret meetings that existed all Summer and during the Fall, and never once was Jack Roberts without his trusty rifle."

EVIDENCE CIRCUMSTANTIAL.

In his opening address to the jury County Attorney Holmes said: "In beginning, gentlemen, I wish to state to you frankly that the State has been unable to find a single witness who saw the fatal shot fired that brought to a tragic end the life of J. Edgar Dickinson. And for this reason, gentlemen, the evidence on the part of the State will, if necessary, be what is termed in the law, circumstantial evidence. In other words, the testimony which we shall introduce upon the stand will tend to prove certain facts.

"Let us see how we find matters at the Dickinson home on this eventful evening.

"You will remember that the family at this time at home consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson, Pearl, Hattie and the three small children, in addition to whom there was a hired man by the name of Lathrop Kenney. At supper time Mr. Dickinson was on his way home from Smyrna Mills, where he had been with a load of potatoes. So Mrs. Dickinson, Perley, Hattie and Kenney ate supper without him, the three small children having been previously put to bed. As they were finishing their evening meal, Mr. Dickinson arrived.

"Perley went out and took care of the horses for his father and Mr. Dickinson came into the house and had his supper. In a short time Perley and Kenney walked down to the village, where they remained for an hour or so. On their return they found Mrs. Dickinson in the kitchen, in the dark, sitting in a chair near the window facing the road, with her elbows upon the window sill. The other members of the family had gone to bed. Kenny at once retired. Mrs. Dickinson, in a few moments, also went to bed, and Perley, after bringing the lamp from the dining room into the kitchen, sat down to read the paper.

SAW A SHADOW.

"After reading the paper for a few moments Perley happened to glance at the window, the same window out of which his mother had been looking earlier in the evening, the one facing the road, and there saw what he at first took to be a shadow. A second look, however, convinced him that it was the figure of a man, standing but a short distance back from the kitchen window.

"About 4 o'clock Perley and Kenney were awakened by Mrs. Dickinson calling to Kenney to wake Perley up. Perley got up, dressed himself and went down stairs. On his passing through the dining room on his way to the kitchen, Mrs. Dickinson, speaking from the chamber off the dining room, with an evident desire to prepare her boy for an unusual spectacle said:

"'Something must have happened to your father; he must be sick,' or words to that effect. This woman's surmise, also gentlemen, proved only too true, for on going to that kitchen door, which Perley found ajar, this boy found himself standing almost over the prostrate form of his father lying on the kitchen floor.

HAD GUN WITH HIM.

"We will now return to Roberts. We find him at the Shaw camp, which is on the tote road towards Cortlee camp. This Shaw camp is about six miles from the Dickinson house and four miles from the clearing, approximately. Roberts is seen at this camp by two men at about 11 o'clock. He at that time has with him a 32-40 Winchester, carbine and he states to these men that upon Wednesday, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the very time, gentlemen, that we shall show you he was leaving Island Falls, he was calling moose near Half Moon Lake.

"He also tells them that he was on his way to Cortlee camp to get an old stove which he had left there sometime before. At about 1 o'clock he shows up at Cortlee camp. In reply to a question by Mr. Cortlee as to when he came into the woods, he states first that he came in Thursday, and this he afterwards changes to Wednesday. He appears nervous and ill at ease.

MRS. DICKINSON OVERCOME.

"He says nothing about any stove, for the very good reason that he owns no stove at Cortlee camp and during the afternoon some of the men there state that he was at Island Falls Monday to have the sight of his rifle fixed, that he came back to the woods Tuesday and hasn't been out of the clearing since. He has his dinner and supper at the camp and retires for the night. About midnight he is arrested by Deputy Sheriff John A. Brown."

The jury trying Mrs. Dickinson is made up as follows:

John M. Garrison, farmer; Cyrus Benn, farmer, Hodgon; H. D. Kimball, farmer, Linneus; E. E. Rideou, farmer, Ludlow; George Ingraham, engineer, Houlton; Oscar A. Benn, farmer, Hodgdon; W. H. Bragdon, farmer, Perham; Simon Burns, farmer, Bancroft; A. A. Stewart, farmer, Houlton; Stanley McKain, farmer, Ludlow; Frank Thomas, farmer, Mapleton; Jesse E. Kennedy, farmer, Fort Fairfield.

Mr. Kennedy was named as foreman by Judge Spear.

PROSECUTOR OF MINERS UNDER FRAUD CHARGE

Senator Borah of Idaho Asks Administration Delay Action in Case.

PRESIDENT IS IN DILEMMA

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 15.—President Roosevelt and Attorney-General Bonaparte have been appealed to by Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, indicted for complicity in the timber frauds, to revise his indictment by the Federal Grand Jury, with a view of postponing action until the trial of Moyer, Heywood and Pettibone, accused of murdering Governor Steunenberg of Idaho.

Senator Borah is the special counsel engaged by the State to prosecute these officials of the Western Federation of Miners, and his charges that his indictment was procured by United States District Attorney Ruick, his political enemy, through a conspiracy of the miners.

Embarrasses Administration.

The appeal of Senator Borah places the administration in a rather embarrassing position, for the reason that President Roosevelt has bitterly denounced Moyer, Heywood and Pettibone, although they have not yet been convicted. This denunciation was contained in his reply to the Harriman letter.

The prosecution of Moyer, Heywood and Pettibone is purely a State affair, but the President has virtually demanded that they be convicted. Should he withhold action against Borah it will be charged that he is showing favors to a man who is prosecuting the miners, and if he does not, Borah will be seriously embarrassed in the prosecution of the miners.

Will Delay Trial.

The President and Attorney-General Bonaparte have been told that if United States District Attorney Ruick is allowed to proceed against Senator Borah he will delay the murder trial of Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone.

It has been pointed out to the President that the Grand Jury inquisition in Idaho, under the direction of District Attorney Ruick, is galvanizing in none but Republican leaders in the State.

SIX BIG POLICE PLUMS ARE TO BE GIVEN OUT

There are indications at police headquarters that two captaincies and four lieutenancies, made vacant by death, retirements and transfers, are soon to be filled. Manning of the East Dedham street station, David F. Egan of the Buck Bay station, Patrick F. Kiley of the City Hall station and Herbert W. Goodwin of the Joy street station.

The vacant captaincies were caused by the death of Captain O'Lalor of East Dedham street station and the retirement of Captain Daniel E. Curran of station 9. Station 1 needs a new lieutenant to take the place of Lieutenant William J. Burnett, who has retired; stating 9 one to take the place of James P. Canney, who has been transferred to station 4, Lagrange street, and new lieutenants are to be chosen to fill vacancies at station 2 and one of the other stations.

HUB GIRLS, SAY ARTISTS, ARE FAIR AS CLEO

Foreigners Rave Over Columnar Neck of the Merode—Quite as Beautiful Here.

PHOTOGRAPHS TELL STORY

That Mlle. Cleo de Merode, the famous French dancer, renowned for her perfect figure, splendid form and wondrous grace, has the most beautiful neck in the world is confidently asserted by European connoisseurs, but with these foreign judges of physical perfection many Boston artists and critics take direct issue.

The Boston artists willingly grant that Mlle. Merode's neck may be a shade more graceful, alabaster-like coolness, but they declare that right here in Boston are several young women who have necks fully as beautiful, even when that of Cleo de Merode is under consideration.

Boston friends and admirers of Miss Laura L. Wilson, Miss Eleonora Sears, Miss Mildred A. Pope and Miss Eleanor Hyde think that they have nothing to fear in any contest in which beauty of necks are considered, even if that of Cleo de Merode enters the lists at the same time.

Photographs of the great French beauty indeed show that she is blessed with a very pretty neck, as one of her chief claims to the proud honor that she is one of the world's most attractive women. The beauty of Mlle. Merode is accepted as indisputable. Her oval-like face is accentuated by the handsome manner of wearing her hair, her features are regular. Her eyes are large and speak with a pathetic expression.

But photographs of four of Boston's fairest daughters when compared with the latest taken of the French dancer show at a glance that the Merode neck can claim no more proud place, so far as that feature is concerned, than can that many a Boston girl.

FAIR BOSTON GIRLS RIVAL WONDERFUL MERODE NECK

Foreign connoisseurs declare that Mlle. Cleo de Merode, the famous French beauty, has the most remarkable neck in the world, an alabaster column that is one of the chief of her many attractions. These photographs prove that there are Boston girls who need not fear to enter the lists with her.

THOUSANDS IN LOTTERY GAME FOR N. E. MEN

$130,000, Month Profits for Eight Backers; Cambridge Man Faces Sentence.

U. S. ENDS THE TRAFFIC

The agents in Boston and throughout New England who have been handling the tickets of the Honduras National Lottery company have sent back their last consignment of tickets and the lottery business, a business which has been making $150,000 a month for eight mos. is dead.

Frank Fitzpatrick of Cambridge, reputed millionaire, lover of fast horses and conspicuous member of the Democratic party died one of the pluckiest of Cambridge, will be sentenced at Mobile, Ala., on May 27 upon his plea of guilty in connection with the big successor to the world famous Louisana State Lottery.

More than sixty witnesses, some of them being residents of Boston and other New England cities, have been notified that they will be wanted in Mobile to testify at the impending trials of twenty-five others persons who have been indicted by the Federal grand jury charged with having conspired to violate the law against lotteries in the United States.

Chief Wilkie of the government Secret Service said to-day that he has proof that the lottery company has been paying government officials of Honduras a bonus for the privilege of conducting its drawings in Honduras. General Cabell of New Orleans has been in receipt of a large sum of money each year, in return for which he surrendered to Puerto Cortes and supervised the drawing.

The last days of the lottery have proven of almost unbelievable richness to the promoters. The sale of tickets has extended throughout the entire country, and the profits have been enormous. Chief Wilkie says that only eight men, of whom Fitzpatrick of Cambridge was one, shared in the big profits, and that while the agents were well paid their profits were as nothing compared with those which were made by the principal promoters.

TOWIND UP N.H. MONTE CARLO

EXETER, N. H., April 16.—With the consent of all the creditors, whose claims aggregate nearly $200,000, Nathaniel W. Hobbs, an attorney of Concord, was in Probate Court yesterday appointed assignee of the New England Breeders' Club, owner of the Salem track. His bond was placed at $50,000. The club was ordered to file within thirty days an inventory of the property of the club.

MRS. EDDY'S FOES, SAY TRUSTEES, INCITED SUIT

SPIRITED ANSWER TO PLAINTIFFS FILED BY CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LEADERS.

CONCORD, N. H., April 16.—That Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy's enemies, and not her "next friends," are the real instigators of the suit for an accounting of her property is declared by the Eddy trustees in the answer filed in court yesterday.

They emphatically deny all the allegations made by the protesting relatives' supplemental bill in equity.

They demand an immediate hearing of their motion for leave to intervene and be substituted as plaintiffs in place of the present "next friends," and ask the court to defer the supplemental petition of the petitioners to vacate the trust deed until their motion has been ruled upon.

"Initiated by Enemies."

They crave authority "at any stage of the proceedings" to ask the court to determine five salient questions, the most important of which relates to whether the relatives acted of their own volition or were incited by other undisclosed persons, not friends, but enemies to Mrs. Eddy and her religious teachings, and not for the purpose of benefiting Mrs. Eddy or protecting her property, as they claim, and barry her personally and to bring reproach if possible upon the religion of which she is the founder.

The court is also asked to ascertain if the bill in equity was brought in "good faith"; whether the proceeding is "illusory," and lastly to settle any and all questions affecting the standing of the so-called "next friends."

The charges that they were parties to any combination or conspiracy, or that Mrs. Eddy's funds were misapplied in any way, are spiritedly contradicted. The trustees deny that they induced Mrs. Eddy to make the trust deed and add that she was fully competent to attend to this transaction.

Trustees' Duty to Prosecute.

The deed was executed without the knowledge of defendants and all defendants in the suit, with the exception of Frye, June 4, 1898. Such an act on the part of Mrs. Eddy they term "reasonable and proper." If the allegations of fraud are true, they cite, it is their duty as trustees to prosecute the defendant, and they feel they are better fitted to figure as plaintiffs than the son, George Glover, and those relatives who join with him.

The answer was filed by Lawyers Streeter and Hollis, counsel for the Eddy interests, at the office of Clerk Shurtleff of Merrimac Superior Court at 5 o'clock. Three hours earlier a briefer motion was entered by General Streeter in behalf of the trustees, saying that the next friends" be ordered forthwith to show cause why the trustees should not be allowed to intervene as plaintiffs, and to file such objections at once.

GRAU LOSSES HALF MILLION IN STOCKS

NEW YORK, April 16.—Ever since the death of Maurice Grau in Paris there have been repeated reports in this city that he had lost in speculations most of the money he made at the Metropolitan Opera House. He is said to have lost half a million.

BOTHA HERO OF CROWDS IN LONDON

LONDON, April 16.—Following a luncheon at the Guild Hall at which 480 guests were seated, the largest banquet ever given by the city, the freedom of the city was to-day conferred upon the colonial premiers assembled here, each receiving a parchment in a solid gold casket.

Premier Roberts and Sir George White made the longest rhetoric by the touching greeting which they rendered General Botha, the fighting commander-in-chief, who succeeded General Joubert at the head of the Boer forces in the recent war.

As the old Boer General entered the Guild Hall he was greeted with a wild outburst of applause. Premier Campbell-Bannerman, while the cheering continued unabated, introduced Botha to General Roberts "Fighting Bobs"), against whom he had made such a gallant stand in the Transvaal. The two warriors grasped hands with all the cordiality which a wholesome respect for each other's fighting ability could prompt.

After the premiers drove from the Hotel Cecil to the Guild Hall through streets gaily bedecked in their honor, they were rendered an ovation by the throngs which lined the streets.

General Botha, in the first carriage, was the hero of the day, the crowds greeting him with cries of "You did the best for your country," and "We wish old Kruger was here to see this."

Out of consideration of General Botha a Boer flag captured at Jacobsdale was removed from the Guild Hall until after the ceremonies.

FORAKER ALLY OF RAILROADS, SAYS GHANDLER

NEW YORK, April 16.—Perry Belmont, chairman of the National Publicity bill organization, opened the meeting of that body to-day in this city with a speech.

One of the interesting features of the meeting was the reading of a characteristically spicy letter from former Senator William E. Chandler of New Hampshire, who figured prominently in a contest of versatility with the President on the railroad rate bill last year.

Chandler, in tracing the history of efforts in the direction of legislation to curb railroad combinations, administered the last Senator Foraker of Ohio with being a railroad accomplisher and intimated that the Republican party had betrayed the big relation in order to serve the exigencies of the last campaign. The letter says in part:

"At the session beginning in December, 1905, I tried to get Republicans to introduce the bill, but did not succeed. However, on February 19, 1906, Senator Tillman introduced it.

"It went to the committee on privileges and elections and remained over a few months. On April 27 Senator Foraker reported it, striking out the prohibition against corporations engaged in interstate and foreign commerce too as to lose railroads to continue their political contributions and extending it to presidential as well as Congressional elections, but it expired, emasculated, in the shuffle of proposes other than officers and directors from using funds. The bill, thus changed, managed to find a passage through the Senate on June 9, and after remaining over a month in the hands of another political campaign, went through the House on January 21, 1907, and became, and now is a law."

SING PRAISES OF THE PHOTOS OF MOTHERHOOD

A feature of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN'S $1,000 Prize Baby Contest which is attracting much attention is the remarkably close resemblance which exists between the mothers who send in their photographs taken with their children and those children themselves.

During the past few days there has been a great increase in the number of photographs of mothers and children that have been submitted, and the women artists serving as the staff of judges have sung the praises of these most interesting photos.

Although the special prize of $100 which is to be given for the best picture of a child taken with its mother will not, of course, be awarded until the end of the contest, many women have sent in pictures of their babies taken with them selves. The photographs of mothers and babies taken together are being submitted to the judges as they are received.

The judges have called attention to the fact that in most of these pictures there is between the mothers and the children a very close resemblance, which, while it cannot always be pointed out, so far as any particular feature or features are concerned, is still present.

Among the many pretty pictures which have been received lately are the two published to-day.

Mrs. Albert W. Belcher is shown with her baby, Evelyn Belcher, who is three years and six months old. The Belchers live at No. 57 Highland road, West Somerville.

Little Bertha Wickman, who is two years old, is shown with her mother, Mrs. Wickman, who lives at No. 28 Mascot street, Dorchester.

The number of pictures of mothers and children received includes has greatly increased. Mothers have come to see that the pictures of mothers and children taken together form one of the most fascinating features of this interesting Prize Baby Contest, and they are sending in more of their pictures as the weeks go by.

MAYOR BUSSE INAUGURATED IN CHICAGO

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, April 16.—Fred A. Busse was formally inaugurated as Mayor of Chicago last night at the meeting of the City Council. With him went into office the cabinet officials whose names already had been announced and whose appointments were approved by the aldermen.

To-day Chicago is under the administration of Republican officials for the first time since the close of the term of George B. Smith in 1897. All appointments went into effect at once, and the officials assumed the actual work of their departments to-day. The only appointment not hitherto announced was that of Ernest Magerstat as city collector.

BOSTON LACKS SEARCHLIGHTS; AT FOE'S MERCY

Boston is at the mercy of a foreign foe, according to the startling purport of Washington dispatches regarding glaring inefficiency in the harbor defenses.

Although the government has been working for years to bring the city defences up to date and has provided modern forts and high power artillery, the experts have failed to provide searchlights, and without searchlights Boston would be defenceless in a night attack.

On account of this lack of lights there will be no night manoeuvers this Summer and the naval militia will not participate on account of a lack of suitable craft for the web foot brigade.

WHITNEY READY TO RUN SECOND WITH DOUGLAS

"If the interests of the Democrat party of Massachusetts would be promoted by my taking second place on the ticket with Ex-Governor Douglas, I am willing to take it," said Henry M. Whitney last evening.

"It is not a decision on my part," he said, "for although any man might have an ambition to occupy the chair of Governor of Massachusetts, and it is a very pardonable one, I want first to see the Democratic party victorious.

"I want to see the people express emphatically their desire for tariff revision. If it is the opinion of the Democratic party of this State that it would add strength to the ticket by placing my name in second place, I would gladly accept it."

No overtures have been made to him by the Douglas men, says Mr. Whitney.

ROOSEVELT'S WRATH POURED OUT ON CONSUL

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Charles A. A. Ekstrumsen, the Swedish Vice Consul at St. Louis, is in disgrace. President Roosevelt has ordered his exequatur withdrawn.

Ekstrumsen brought the President's irate down upon his head by writing him a letter which the executive considered impertinent and discourteous. The President, several days ago, refused to receive a delegation from St. Louis that came on to Washington in the interests of the Lewis publications, which for a long period, have been in trouble with the postoffice department.

Ekstrumsen was a member of the delegation, and the President's refusal to receive him threw Ekstrumsen into a rage, and the letter he addressed to the President is said to have been boiling over with bitterness, and in addition to upbraiding the President, is said to have accused Secretary Cortelyou, with being unfair, unjust and a stranger to the "square deal."

Mr. Ekstrumsen is in Washington now pleading for reinstatement.

NATICA RIVES ILL, INSISTS UPON WEDDING

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 16.—"I will marry Mr. Burden to-morrow, despite all reports to the contrary. There has been no dissension in my family. My father and mother heartily approve of the match, and though I am ill I will be led to the altar to-morrow by my betrothed, so as not to disappoint my friends and to set at rest for all time malicious reports that there has been parental objection to my marrying Mr. Burden."

Though ill in her apartment in the Hotel Netherlands, Miss Natica Rives, the handsome young daughter of Mrs. George L. Rives, made this statement to-day on the eve of her wedding to-morrow to William P. Burden, the rich young society man.

Is Stopping at Hotel.

Rumor had it that illness might set aside the match—postpone it for some time—but Miss Rives is determined to go to the altar with her affianced man of her choice to-morrow.

Stories of parental dissatisfaction were issued to the effect that while Miss Rives, ill, stayed at the Hotel Netherlands, while her father, Mr. Rives, was at his palatial Newport residence, No. 14 West Thirty-eighth street, the coming wedding is set aside by the fact that Miss Rives's social duties have forced her temporary illness and that to forego her duty to society she left her parents' home and went to live at the hotel.

Parents Declare Approval.

Her father and mother are constant callers at the hotel and the young bride-to-be has the exacting attention of both.

Mr. Rives was at an impromptu farewell cachelor dinner of his prospective son-in-law last evening, and those approached on the subject concerning the reported breach he said:

"I desire to say that Mrs. Rives and myself heartily approve of the match. The marriage is to take place from our house, as every one knows who is in the slightest degree familiar with the matter."

POLICE DECLARE GAFFNEY AIMED GUN AT OFFICER

ACCUSE STRIKE-BREAKER WHO FIRED INTO SUNDAY CROWD WITH SERIOUS CHARGE.

That John J. Gaffney, the New York strike-breaker who shot Splros Prinsas, a young Greek, who was standing outside of Fort Bradley, the strike-breakers' headquarters at No. 161 Albany street, Sunday, aimed at Patrolman John Sweeney of the Lagrange Street Station is the contention of the police of that station this morning.

Sweeney and young Prinsos were standing shoulder to shoulder in the crowd on the Curve street side of Fort Bradley, and the police say that they will be able to prove in court that Gaffney fired for what struck Prinsos at Sweeney.

"Breakers" Threatened Crowd.

Sunday afternoon, when the crowd became dense about Fort Bradley, a number of strike-breakers, including Gaffney, left the fort and began jeering at the crowd.

Some of the strike-breakers threatened members of the crowd nearest the fort with physical violence.

When Officer Sweeney thought that there would perhaps be a riot he drove the strike-breakers back into the fort.

The police have found a number of persons who say that after Gaffney and the other strike-breakers entered the building, Gaffney passed from the second floor window evidently trying to locate someone in the crowd.

Officers Seek Evidence.

Finally he stopped at the window facing Curve street, took a revolver from the hands of a man standing near him, and, witnesses say, took aim at Sweeney.

The bullet hit young Prinsos, and he fell against Officer Sweeney.

The police declare this morning that, when Gaffney, who is held in $5,000 bail for shooting Prinsos, faces the court again April 22, there will probably be another charge against him of "assault with intent to kill upon a police officer."

In search of evidence to strengthen their case against Gaffney, several officers from Station 4 spent part of to-day at Fort Bradley.

Boston Men Driving Teams.

Master teamsters asserted to-day that they have hired a number of strike-breakers in Boston and that they now have men enough to drive all the teams they need to send out.

Several of the contractors have more teams on the streets to-day than yesterday.

J. Fifield, Richardson & Co. had seven teams out early. Yesterday they had four in service.

J. S. Hilliard & Co. had out five teams, the Boston Forwarding and Transportation Company six teams, the number they had in service yesterday, and Flanders & Co. started eight teams from their stables. Yesterday they had but five on the streets. Johnson & Co. sent out five teams.

No teams left the Cambridge stables of J. S. Hilliard & Sons, and Tutsey of East Boston had out two less drivers than yesterday. From his stables the strike-breakers took out eleven double and three single teams this morning.

Call Farley to End Strike.

That James Farley, the "king of strike-breakers," is to send five hundred men to Boston at once to break the teamsters' strike, is the declaration to-day of John F. Xaven, of No. 31 Linden Park street, Roxbury, who calls himself one of Farley's lieutenants in this city.

The demand to-day that the strike-breakers be disarmed at once is more insistent than ever, in spite of the fact that Police Commissioner O'Meara has said that while his men cannot legally search the teamsters.

More desertions are reported from the non-union ranks. One report to-day was that out of a complement of 200 men brought here from New York, but few are serving as well at work every day.

Edward Mannion, a strike-breaker, who was arrested last night after, it is said, that he attempted to drive the guests of the Hampton House out of the building by flourishing a revolver, appears in the police court to-day to answer to a charge of disorderly conduct.

SHE SLEW BABY; WANTS TO HANG

NORWICH, Ct., April 16.—Walking into the police station yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Sarah Harcourt, aged twenty-five years, coolly announced to Chief Murphy that she had murdered her seven months old baby girl and wanted to suffer the full penalty for her crime. An investigation showed the infant dead in the bedroom of the Harcourt tenement. The woman says an uncontrollable impulse caused her to commit the crime.

There were no witnesses and it is believed that the deed was committed during a fit of insanity. Mrs. Harcourt has lived here since last September, coming from Providence, Mass.

There were no marks on the child's body. Mrs. Harcourt is under $500 bonds, which she secured.

SHUT PLANT TO SOBER UP MEN

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., April 16.—The plant of the Sliips Iron & Steel Company has been closed down indefinitely.

Connell says that the shut-down is for an indefinite period. He declares that the men employed at the mill, most of whom are expert mechanics, will not remain sober, and he refuses to run the plant any longer with men who come to work under the influence of liquor.

Manager McConnell says that he has exhausted efforts to hire sober workmen, but that it seems impossible, and he will keep the plant closed until they sober up.

The men assert it is a move to make the plant an open shop.

5 DIE IN GREAT NORTHERN WRECK

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 16.—Running 40 miles an hour, the Great Northern west bound, Oriental limited, which left here for Pacific coast points Sunday morning, was derailed at Hartiett, N. D. Five persons were killed and a score or more injured, some of them seriously.

DEATH PROBE WELCOMES, SAYS MRS. FITZGERALD

WOMAN IN WHOSE HOUSE GREEN DIED INDIGNANT AT SUSPICIONS.

LOWELL, April 16.—"I would be willing to go before my Maker at this moment and tell all that I know about the death of John Green. In the welcome the fullest investigation more than myself, because I know that it will prove my entire innocence."

In these words Mrs. James Fitzgerald, of No. 25 Kirk street, this city, at whose house Green boarded previous to his death, and who has been asked as to the facts which led the authorities to exhume his body, asserts to the BOSTON AMERICAN that whatever may be inferred, she is not in any way connected in any wrongdoing.

Green was found dead in his room at Mrs. Fitzgerald's house about two weeks ago, presumably a victim of asphyxiation. As the result of an investigation which several insurance companies made, the body was exhumed Sunday and sent to Professor Whitney of Harvard for examination.

"Came Penniless and Ill."

"The whole trouble seems to arise," said Mrs. Fitzgerald, "because I was the beneficiary named in Mr. Green's insurance policy and in other policies. As a matter of fact Green came to me without money and ill, and he asked me if I would board him until he got work.

"I agreed to do this, and when he had been here some time, he told me about this policy which he was unable to keep up. He offered to give it to me in return for my kindness and as part payment for what he was indebted to me.

"It was only after he had urged me for some time to take it that I accepted the responsibility.

"Now there seems to be a lot of talk because he was a victim of gas poisoning before. About that I can only say that as Dr. Green's own word substantiated by competent witnesses that this accident was due to a little carelessness on his part.

"He said that he got up to go to work as he had to be there at six, and when he awoke it was dark.

"He went over and lit the gas to see the time, and when he saw it was only 4:30 he went back to bed, leaving the light turned on a little bit.

"The window was open and the flame was blown out and we found him two hours later. I had him sent right away to the hospital. Was there anything suspicious in that?

"Treated Him Like Mother."

"I have heard it said that the gas pipe in Green's room was so plugged that it could not be removed without tools. It is all nonsense. There was an elbow on top of the pipe and a child could turn it. It was on loose.

"The police and doctors, in fact everybody that was in the room after the poor man was found, said that there was not the least thing suspicious about it.

"Why, I treated that poor man like a mother, and he often said that he never could repay my kindness to him," said Mrs. Fitzgerald, sobbing.

"I would a thousand times rather had him live. He was useful around the house and such a dear friend of us all.

"I will tell you why this terrible trouble has started. I am suing an insurance company for $3,000, the amount of an insurance policy on my brother, James Shallow, of Billerica, and it comes up in court on April 24.

"When my brother died, he had quite a little estate, which was divided among me and my brothers and sisters. The insurance policy came to me as my share.

Denies Impersonation.

"Was there anything wrong in that? One of the papers this morning says that somebody else represented him when he took the policy out and took the examination. The idea is ridiculous.

"James was lame, and besides, the man that insured him knew him for eleven years before he was insured, and he saw him after he died.

"He was examined by four doctors before he was passed. He died at his home of quick consumption.

"The company tried to settle with me for less than the amount named in the policy and I turned them down. But they have been trying to prejudice everybody against me since they took up the case.

About the two other policies, those of Mrs. Eliza Lane, who died on June 5, 1904, and Mrs. Bridget Gourley, who died some time later, and whose insurance was paid to Mrs. Fitzgerald, she explains at length how she happened to be named as the beneficiary, and declared that she had not profited by their deaths, in fact had lost considerable money because of her kindnesses to both women.

"Took Policy in Charity."

Mrs. Gourley came to my house late one evening, feeble and sick, and asked for a night's lodging. She told me she did not have a cent and, rather than see her suffer, I told her I would gladly give her a room for the night.

In the morning she asked me if she could stay and, while I pitied her, I told her that I was sorry I could not afford to keep her.

She said she felt very ill and did not think she had long to live and would like very much to find a home with me. She mentioned the insurance policy and told me that was the only thing she had in the world of any value and I might have it if I wanted.

I did not want it, and it was only after I had seen one of my friends and I was urged to take up the policy rather than have it lapse, that I consented.

Before she died my sister also had been at the Tewksbury almshouse for fifteen years and she had long suffered from consumption.

"Spent More Than Paid."

"So it became sick after she came to my house and I had two doctors and a nurse attend her. When she died I gave her a good suitable funeral with a mass and I have receipts to show that the money I spent on the poor woman amounted to more than what I got on the policy.

"That is what I get in return for kindness," said Mrs. Fitzgerald, sadly.

Relatives of Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Fitzgerald stated that she had taken her policy only at the solicitation of the insurance company officials who were anxious to secure it.

Mrs. Lane was over seventy years old and sick for two years before she came to me. I defy anyone to prove that I profited in this case. The statement that Mrs. Lane had another policy in the Equitable for $250 which I got I brand as a false one.

"I have the assurance of the John Hancock company that they are perfectly satisfied that the claim which they paid was all right and they profited to go into court and substantiate it. Isn't that good enough to satisfy anybody?

Welcomes Investigation.

I am sorry that all this trouble has been caused, but as long as there is so much talk and uncertainty, there is no doubt gladder than I am to see a full investigation take place. I know that I will come out of it all vindicated and then I will have the satisfaction for some of the things which have been said about me.

Mrs. Fitzgerald has retained Hogan & Hogan of Central street to look after her interests. William Hogan of the firm is a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day.

"We shall take action for some of these veiled insinuations and charges as soon as the proper time arrives and those guilty will suffer. Until the further developments in the case are reached, I would not care to say more."

The body of Green is now in the hands of Professor Whitney and until he makes known the result of his examination of the contents of the stomach, no further action is contemplated by the authorities. His report is not expected for several days.

"Suspicious Circumstances."

Medical Examiner Harris says:

The exhuming of the body was made on account of certain suspicious circumstances connected with Green's death.

"What the circumstances are, I am not prepared to state. To all outward appearances the stomach was all right, but nothing can be told definitely until it goes through the hands of a chemist."

The police are reticent about the case and refuse to say on what grounds they decided to have the body exhumed.

It is said that only a few days ago Moffatt was responsible for the order which was signed by the Mayor.

Mrs. Fitzgerald lives with her husband and little girl in a cosy little home near the centre of the city.

She has conducted boarding houses for some time previous to taking the one on Kirk street, which she rented from No. 28 Bridge street.

She denies that she even considered or was connected in anyway with the old City Hotel on Merrimac street, where, it is said, there were a number of mysterious fires.

INVITES INQUIRY IN LODGER'S DEATH.

Mrs. James Fitzgerald declares John Green gave her his life insurance policy in gratitude for her kindness. The child with her in the photo is her daughter Ethel.

RICH GIRL'S DEATH BY SHOCK PROBED BY CITY

Miss Greenwood's Electrocution in Home Arouses All Marlboro—Tech Expert to Be Hired.

Special to the Boston American.

MARLBORO, April 16.—The whole community is aroused by the mysterious electrocution of wealthy, Anna Greenwood at her home on Saturday night, and the city government has started a rigid investigation to determine who is responsible for her death.

On the committee of investigation are Mayor E. F. Brown, Aldermen Donahue, McCarthy and Richer. The City Council on Monday names three other members. The committee is authorized to hire an electrical expert not employed by any local service corporation. Professor C. R. Jackson of Technology will undoubtedly be engaged. The wire systems of the telephone, trolley and lighting companies will be thoroughly investigated.

Killed as She Touched Light.

Miss Greenwood was killed as she left the supper table to telephone. As she touched an electric light near the 'phone she received the fatal shock. The burning out of an electric light transformer near the house is blamed for the tragedy.

An inquest will probably be ordered. The report of the medical examiner, to the effect that Miss Greenwood was killed by an electric shock, has been submitted to District Attorney Sanderson and to Judge J. W. McDonald of the district court.

Captain William Brophy and C. D. W. Jarvis, electricians employed by the New England Telephone Company, and Manager Godfrey of the Marlboro Electric Light Company have already investigated Miss Greenwood's death. Captain Brophy said:

Broken Transformer Blamed.

"There is no doubt the primary cause of the disaster was the breaking down of the electric light transformer in the street. The heavy 2,200-volt current, instead of being transformed into 110 volts, came in with full pressure.

"Miss Greenwood left the supper table to go to the telephone, according to members of her family, but she was not in the act of telephoning when killed. From the horse reported on the telegraph today it appeared that she had touched the electric light shade, intending to turn on the light, and then had established a 'ground' by also touching a radiator which stood beside the table. She may have been reaching for the telephone crank at the time, but she did not ring in her call.

"It is perfectly clear the trouble lay in the defective electric light transformer in the street; in fact, this is admitted by the company."

Miss Greenwood, who was twenty-nine years old, was one of the belles of the city. She was fond of horses and dogs, was a clever rider and an expert driver. Her father, Charles H. Greenwood, is one of the wealthiest men in the city.

MELLEN AND MORSE AGREE ON TRAFFIC

Competition between the New York, New Haven & Hartford Company and the Morse steamboat system is no longer a possibility, according to statements made here today. There will be no passenger line between Boston and New York operated by Morse and the freight business of the New York, New Haven & Hartford on the waterways will be diverted to the Morse steamships.

This explains the withdrawal of the Joy Line from Boston. Regardless of denials the Joy Line is controlled in ownership by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad.

By an agreement entered upon between President Mellen and Charles W. Morse of New York, Morse leases the Joy Line, draws the Joy liners from Boston and transfers all its freight traffic and that of the Fall River Line on Boston freight to the Metropolitan Steamship Company of the consolidated Steamship Lines. This is what is known as the Morse system.

On its part the Consolidated Steamship Lines agree to forego their plan of a passenger service between Boston and New York on the outside lines.

UNIVERSITY HAS MYSTERY FIRES

MONTREAL, April 16.—McGill University suffered its second great loss from fire within a few weeks to-day, when the mechanic building, one of the largest of the group comprising the university, was burned to the ground. The loss is estimated at $500,000. The cause is a mystery.

Like the McDonald engineering building destroyed by fire on April 5, with a loss of nearly $1,000,000, the mechanical department contained records and instruments which probably cannot be reproduced.

FROLIC EXILE TO SURRENDER

After having been practically in exile since the yacht Frolic landed its contraband cargo of Chinese at Providence last Fall, arrangements have been made between counsel for James B. Lehnemann of Brookline, who has been wanted by the federal officers in connection with the smuggling, and the United States District Attorney's office, to have Lehnemann give himself up at the Federal building Thursday.

GATE TENDER RESCUES GIRL

The presence of mind of Frank J. Holden, gate tender at the Pleasant street railroad crossing, yesterday, saved the life of little four-year-old Mildred Gibbons of Malden from being crushed beneath the wheels of the Haverhill express.

The child strayed away from her mother and walked underneath the gates directly in front of the train. Catching sight of her little blue dress, Gateman Holden grasped her with one arm and jumped aside just as the train was thundering by.

HANG MAN WHO KILLED TO ROB

WETHERSFIELD, Ct., April 16.—Henry G. Bailey, murderer of George H. Goodale, was hanged just after midnight at the state prison.

The murder was committed in Middletown, July 6 last. Goodale was a fish peddler, who was beaten to death by Bailey and then robbed. The murderer was captured near Toronto, Can.

HUNDREDS TAKE PART IN DEMOCRATS' BALL

Over 300 couples took part in the first annual ball of the O'Connell Democratic Club, named for Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, held in Bethesda Hall, South Boston, last evening. A number of prominent politicians were present.

FIRE DAMAGES N. Y. THEATRE

NEW YORK, April 16.—Fire, which for a time threatened the entire destruction of the building and menaced the big structures adjoining it, burned out the upper floor of the New York Theatre early to-day.

The fire caused an incipient panic among the guests in the Hotels Astor and Metropole, many of whom rushed from their rooms.

WINDOW FALLS; SMOTHERS GIRL

YARMOUTH, Me., April 16.—Coming home during the absence of the other members of the family, Hazel M., nine-year-old daughter of Fred P. Allen, who had been visiting her aunt, raised a window to enter the house. When she attempted to climb in the window came down on her neck, holding her, as in a vise, until she was suffocated.

Evelyn Thaw's Mother Defends Herself From Delmas's Harsh Charge

MRS. CHARLES J. HOLMAN TELLS OF HER STRUGGLES TO SUPPORT CHILDREN.

PITTSBURG, April 16.—Driven by Attorney Delmas's charges to tell of the hardships and troubles she encountered following her husband's death and while rearing her two children, Mrs. Charles J. Holman, mother of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, to-day gave the following statement for exclusive publication in Boston in the AMERICAN:

Declaring the statement is made with regret and by counsel's advice, Mrs. Holman declares she is prepared to prove the truth of each and every sentence.

From the time when she was left a penniless widow with two small children, she tells of her career—mentions her struggles as a lodging house keeper, her failure in the business, their removal to Philadelphia, the loss of her furniture for debt, her trip to New York, the meeting of Evelyn with an artist and her subsequent posing for friends.

Then she outlines their life in New York, declaring they all three lived in one room, sometimes went hungry and suffered otherwise until Evelyn went on the stage. She states she could not induce the girl to give up the idea of being an actress, and that she chaperoned her in the theatres. Mrs. Holman further tells of Evelyn's stage career and of her meeting with Stanford White. Her statement, given over her own signature to a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN, follows:

By Mrs. Charles J. Holman.

Two days after the night upon which Harry Thaw shot Stanford White at Madison Square Garden, we received this telegram:

"It is most important for you to say absolutely nothing. (Signed) F."

I immediately formed the resolution that I should say nothing to say one pending the outcome of the trial of Harry Thaw, which I realized must take place. This is the only communication that has come to me from my daughter since the murder.

I did say nothing. I remained silent. I have remained silent until now and I would have kept silence had it not been for the attacks upon me, made by Mr. Delmas, in his closing address to the Thaw jury.

Made no Statement to Jerome.

I made no statement to District Attorney Jerome, nor to any of his representatives. I have had private communications with persons whom I regarded as personal friends. Aside from these, I have not publicly commented upon the case. Neither did I ask the district attorney in any way to prejudice his case for the prosecution of Harry Thaw. Neither Mr. Jerome, Mr. Garvin or Mr. Harbridge came to Pittsburg to see me; nor have I seen them there or elsewhere.

In this statement I shall endeavor to proceed as impersonally and dispassionately as it is possible to do. I have been forced to take the defensive from the start, and the situation was rendered intolerable by Mr. Delmas's aspersions.

If any of the declarations here seem harsh, it must be recalled that each is a fact and that each fact can be proved, and that such proof is in my hands and ready to be produced.

Can Prove All Charges.

This statement is uttered with reluctance. It is done on the advice of counsel and with the understanding that there is no fact here which cannot be proved in a court of law.

Many facts which relate to the subject will be omitted. The object is to deal principally with certain specific allegations and to supplement, by more or less extended explanations—which are necessary to a proper understanding of the situation—my denials.

One of the sentences from Mr. Delmas's speech referred to me as "a mother who manifested that character of frivolity and extravagance which were later to bear such deplorable consequences."

At the death of my first husband I was thrown entirely upon my own resources to support my daughter and son, both small children, and myself. When the estate was settled and all debts paid I found myself with exactly $113.53 and a home filled with furniture.

Evelyn Never "Household Drudge."

It was an important question what to do.

I had no source of income, either from private means of my own or from relatives of myself or husband. I knew nothing of business. I was a home woman. Up to that time there had been no need for me to practice fine sewing.

My husband's mother suggested that I seek to make a living taking roomers. The venture was not a success. Possibly it was my fault, but if it was it was not on account of extravagance.

From the time they were babies, I was extremely fond of my children, especially of my daughter. I severed myself as my mother would, to dress her well and to rear her in the same luxury that we enjoyed before her father's death. As she grew up I did not relax in these efforts. Florence was never the "household drudge" as Mr. Delmas called her.

True, she did do little tasks about the house, the same as I did when I was a child, and the same as thousands of other little girls do every day.

Expended Earnings for Herself.

I did my own housework after Mr. Nesbit's death. I could not afford a servant. Florence was then twelve or thirteen years old. To quote Mr. Delmas, "Florence was endowed with the fatal gift of beauty." Left to which the mother soon saw the means of supporting the family.

This refers to the posing Florence did in Philadelphia and New York.

She did pose, and her earnings, which were never large, went to support herself, her brother or myself. Both in Philadelphia and New York I sewed for a living. Our combined earnings barely paid our expenses.

Florence's money was always given to me willingly and without compulsion upon my part. I spent it on her.

In Philadelphia she was nearly sixteen and old enough to realize our situation, and there was never any question between us that the posing—which was never of the figure and never undraped—so far as I knew—was for her benefit, and that the money was to be expended for her.

Met Artist at Summer Hotel.

The work was not hard, and my daughter—in my hearing at least—never complained that it was a hardship. It was only a few hours daily. The way she happened to pose was the result of a friendship formed by her one Summer while she was staying for several weeks at a cottage, boarding house at Cresson, a mountain resort near Altoona, Pa. She was with friends, a schoolmate and the latter's family. I sent her there and paid her board, although we could hardly spare the money.

No mother that thinks much of her child does to deprive her of any pleasure that it is possible to give. Upon her return she told us of an elderly man she had met at Cresson, and who seemed greatly taken with her.

"He is a great artist," she said, "and wants to paint my picture. He said it would make him famous if he could paint my portrait.

Broke Up Housekeeping.

The matter made no impression on me at the moment.

Finally it became necessary to give up our house in Pittsburg. The rooming enterprise was not successful. I looked about for something to do, and finally there was promised a position in Philadelphia as a designer.

We broke up and I went to Philadelphia. I sent the children to a farm near Tarentum, Pa., owned by a sister of Mr. Nesbit. I proceeded then to Philadelphia to establish a home for them. The children remained in the country for weeks. I paid their board.

I rented rooms in Philadelphia and fitted them up with a part of my furniture. Our effects did not follow us right away. The position I had moved to Philadelphia to take did not materialize. There was no home for us.

By selling articles of furniture I succeeded in obtaining enough money to purchase food for the children, for by this time the children were with me.

Landlady Seized Furniture.

My daughter's teeth required attention and a dentist who had an office in the house undertook to repair them. He turned the bill over to the landlady for collection. This was for rent he owed her. I had paid my rent in advance.

She seized our furniture to satisfy his debt, which she could do under the Pennsylvania laws. Among other things she took my piano.

I went to see attorney after attorney, but none of them would aid me unless I gave them a retaining fee, which I could not do. We moved to another place and I had to dispose of what furniture was left to pay our board.

One evening Florence and I went to Broad street station in Philadelphia to see a Pittsburg friend off on a train. Suddenly Florence left my side and ran to greet an elderly man whom she brought to me.

Began to Pose for Friend.

"This is the artist I met at Cresson," she said. "He is the one who wants to paint my picture."

The man introduced himself as Mr. Storm.

He told me his sister, Mrs. Darragh, was a portrait painter. Mrs. Darragh subsequently asked Florence to pose for her. When we became better acquainted with her, she learned of our financial situation and through her Florence posed for various artists and photographers, only women at the start. George Gibbs was the first man for whom she posed.

It was through some of these photographs that Florence afterwards took to the Broadway Magazine in New York that she subsequently became first known to the public.

I planned to go to New York. There was nothing which I could do in Philadelphia except sewing. My specific was the only thing I had to depend upon to earn a living, but I tried as much as a woman with two small children would do to secure work which was honorable.

Begins Struggle in New York.

Through persons whom I met in Philadelphia I got letters to persons in New York who, I was told, would obtain a position for me. I again sent the children to the farm of their father's sister. Then I went to New York to see what I could do. I took a room on West Twenty-second street.

At this time, despite the smallness of my resources, I had managed to keep up appearances. I made all my own clothes and those of my daughter. I was handy with the needle and fashionable materials I was able to fashion gowns that appeared much more expensive than they really were. Few persons would have believed that we were so poor. The letters which I had promised me in New York were not obtainable.

Here again I managed to keep body and soul together. I made a bond to mould struggle. I had the names of four artists from Mrs. Darragh, to whom she had permit Florence to pose until I was satisfied that they were gentlemen.

No "Trudging About Studios."

If my recollection serves, Florence posed only for Carroll Beckwith, Irving Wiles, Carl Hiemer and Mr. Church, all of whom I know to be honorable gentlemen.

There was no "trudging from studio to studio" in the manner that Mr. Delmas would make it appear. Mr. Beckwith, I remember, warned me to be careful of what artists I allowed Florence to pose for. I was cautioned to be always accompany her.

This I did as much as possible. I could not always do this, for I was sewing to make our living.

We, the three of us, lived in one single room. I am not ashamed to say that some days we did not have enough to eat, for our poverty was honest, and I suffered upon through no fault of our own.

In my pride I kept from our friends our true circumstances, and hoped that something would happen to relieve the situation.

Florence Loved Stage.

Florence was in love with the stage. As a little girl in Pittsburg she had talked of being an actress. As she grew older the idea seemed to be firmly implanted in her mind. I was steadfastly opposed to it and did all I could to discourage her, but it was useless.

Frankly, I confess that I possessed neither the resolution nor the discipline to cope with the situation. Florence was a good girl, but I was unable to restrain her to abandon her notion for the stage.

Florence was sixteen on the previous Christmas day. I told Mr. Fisher that Florence had threatened to run away as

BLACK REFUSES THAW OFFER AS CHIEF COUNSEL

NEW YORK, April 16.—The positive statement was made to-day that former Governor Frank S. Black had been requested to act as chief counsel for Harry K. Thaw at his next trial.

Governor Black replied that under no circumstances would he touch the case. This announcement was confirmed to-day by an associate of the distinguished lawyer who conducted the successful defence of Roland B. Molineux.

Lawyer Peabody visited Thaw in the Tombs to-day and spent nearly an hour with the prisoner. When he came out Mr. Peabody said:

"Mr. Thaw has authorized me to say this:

"No statement will be given out by him until Thursday, and no one connected with the case will make any statement to-day."

On Thursday Thaw himself, it is expressed, will issue a statement denying stating who his counsel are to be.

OIL KING'S NEW PASTOR TO HAVE FULL SWING

Lands in New York from England in Response to Cabled Promise of a Free Hand.

NO STRANGER IN AMERICA

NEW YORK, April 16.—Rev. Charles F. Aked, John D. Rockefeller's new pastor at the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, and formerly pastor of the Pembroke Baptist church at Liverpool, England, arrived here yesterday to assume the duties of his American charge.

John D. Rockefeller, when he cabled asking Mr. Aked to come to America, insist to have assured him a free hand in his work here. Mr. Aked has been pastor of the Pembroke church for sixteen years. This English preacher is not a stranger in America, for he visited this country in 1906, 1897 and again in 1902, as well as about three months ago. He is well known to Baptist America because of his books, sermons, platform addresses and his active participation in English social reforms. He was born in Nottingham on August 27, 1864, and received his higher education at Midland Baptist College and Cassedy College, Nottingham.

ACTOR JANIS IS LOST OFF SHIP

NEW YORK, April 16.—Word was received by witnesses from the steamer Minneapolis that Percy Janis, a brother of Ole Janis, the youthful star of "The Vanderbilt Cup," had disappeared from the boat yesterday. It is feared that he either fell or jumped overboard.

Janis, who was twenty-two years old, was on his way to London with the "Mrs. Temple's Telegram" company.

WOMAN GETS ONLY $5,000 FROM $35,000

Residuary Legatee, She Pays All the Rest to Others and for Lawyers' Fees.

HAD EXPECTED $92,000

With a residuary legacy of $3,515.10 out of a fortune of $34,782.69, in which the attorneys' fees, court charges, legacies, taxes and incidentals amounted to $31,267.59, Mrs. Laura A. Murphy, formerly of Boston and now living at No. 227 East Twenty-fifth street, New York city, wife of David W. Murphy, the comedian, has just settled up the estate of Richard Garvey, who died in Boston in 1900, making her his residuary legatee.

When Mr. Garvey, who had roomed in the lodging house kept here by Mrs. Murphy, died he left to her as residuary legatee his share in the fortune of his nephew, Andrew Jeffries Garvey of New York, formerly a member of the famous Tweed ring.

Nellie Garvey, a daughter of Richard Garvey, with whom Jeffries Garvey was cut off without a penny in the will. All of the dying man's prospects he settled to Mrs. Murphy, who housed him when he was without a home and cared for him as he was passing away.

Contested by Daughter.

The will of Richard Garver was contested by the daughter, and she won in the lower courts, but in November, 1900, Judge Morton of the Supreme Court overruled the decision of the Probate Court and allowed the will by which Nellie Garvey was disinherited.

Richard Garvey's daughter was still remembered, for Mrs. Murphy paid over to the attorney for the daughter $10,000, as the accounts to the settlement of the estate show.

Mr. Garvey left four legacies: To Mary E. Leman, mother of Mrs. Murphy, $1,000; to Harry Leman, Mrs. Murphy's brother, $1,000; to St. Joseph's Parish, West End, Boston, $500, and to Josephine Catin, a little girl who had run errands for him, $200.

Since Mr. Garvey's death the estate has been in the courts and in the hands of the administrator. It was within the past few days that Mrs. Murphy came to Boston from her New York home and made the final settlements of the estate.

Had Expected $92,000.

"I at first expected that I would get $92,000," she said to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN. "What I do get after all the legacies have been paid, after what I allowed Nellie Garvey and after attorney's and court fees have been paid is $3,515.10. This is all that comes to me out of the original $34,782.69 that was finally sent here from New York after Andrew Jeffries Garvey had died and his estate was adjusted.

"There was over $11,600 in attorney fees alone in 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1903. The court fees, Boston taxes, administrator's fees, expenses and all sorts of legal incidentals ate up the rest. In addition to the $3,200 I received I got about $1,500 before this at different times, so you see that I did not get $5,000 out of what my husband whimsically calls 'my fortune.'"

THE PATH TO BEAUTY

No Need to Have Wrinkles if These Expert Suggestions Are Followed

A very light current is turned on when using the electric roller, and the operator works it from left to right and vice versa, across the wrinkles.

THE matter of electricity in the eradication of wrinkles is still another subject, for the treatment of skin with the electric roller has now grown to be a recognized industry with face culturists.

Wrinkles are rolled out, furrows filled in, the face is plumped and the countenance grows young again. At least, such is the claim of those who advocate electricity.

To roll out the wrinkles with an electric roller one needs, first of all, the battery. Then, in addition to this, there must be a wrist electrode, a set of cords and a massage roller. There must also be a pot of skin food, which is easily made at home.

Use Light Current

The skin food is rubbed into the skin until the flesh feels dry to the hand. The current is now turned on very lightly and the roller is taken in hand. The operator must have a very steady nerve and must work the roller from right to left and from left to right, directly across the wrinkles, so to speak.

The current should be so low that there is scarcely any sensation, and the roller should be passed very lightly upon the skin. Three treatments a week are enough.

Benzoinated Bath

There is another treatment for wrinkles, and this is one that is being generally used in Paris now. The patient, whose wrinkles must be taken at a very early stage, is told to treat her skin to a benzoinated bath. This is done every other day; on alternate days the skin is tapped with a ball of cold cream.

To make the ball of cold cream, take enough skin food or cream to make a lump as big as half an egg. Tie it securely in a bit of linen, so as to make a little bag. The the bag on the end of a stick, and then use it to tap the skin. This is sometimes called the drumstick treatment. The cream is gently drummed into the skin, and at the same time the muscles are hardened, the skin is rounded and the flesh is developed.

This is considered the best of all treatments for a thin face, which takes on beautiful curves when tapped in this manner.

Many of the women readers of the AMERICAN have asked for personal letters on the subject of beauty. All questions asked will be answered in this column, and I shall be glad to hear from any and all of you.

A treatment for wrinkles used in Paris is a benzoinated bath, alternating every other day with tappings from a ball of cold cream

Shun Cigarettes and Cocktails as You Would Poison

By Beatrice Fairfax

SHE came into the restaurant, a slim, graceful, little figure gowned in pink and white, with a big black picture hat topping her very pretty head. I sat at a table near and could not avoid seeing and hearing all that went on.

She was one of a party of four, and when cocktails appeared she looked questioningly at the other three for a minute, then picked up a glass and swallowed its contents.

The other woman and the two men seemed to take her action quite for granted. She did not seem to like the cocktail very much, judging from her grimace, but she drank it all.

In a few minutes her voice grew louder and her cheeks flushed a deep red. She lolled in her chair and leaned half across the table.

People all around stared at her—some looked shocked, some disgusted, some amused.

Her actions were rough and bold, and it was hard to believe that she was the girl who had looked so dainty and pretty an hour before.

The girl was no more to blame—not as much, perhaps—than the two men and the older girl who had encouraged her to drink the cocktails.

Any man who will offer a young girl an intoxicating drink is beneath contempt. He knows perfectly well what it will affect her, and he would probably knock a man down who offered his sister the same kind of a drink.

Sometimes a girl will take a drink because she does not like to refuse. She thinks it smart and worldly, and is quite proud if it does not go to her head.

She also thinks that cigarette smoking adds to her charm. Perhaps if she heard the opinions of men on the subject she would not be quite so keen on cocktails and cigarettes.

"There is nothing so disenchanting," said a man to me, "as the odor of whiskey and tobacco about a pretty, sweet girl."

"Cigarette smoking is unhealthy as well as unwomanly.

Do you think, dear girls, that a man who is worth marrying would choose a wife who smokes and drinks? I am quite sure he would not.

If you have grown into the habit of taking things to drink or of smoking, break the habit right now.

Don't say, "I will only take a drink on such-and-such an occasion." A habit of that kind has to be broken absolutely or you will never get control of it.

You can't afford to sacrifice your looks and your health just for the sake of a little false stimulant.

If a man takes you out for dinner and urges you to drink with him, you can make up your mind that he is the kind of man who will do you no good. Accept no more invitations from him.

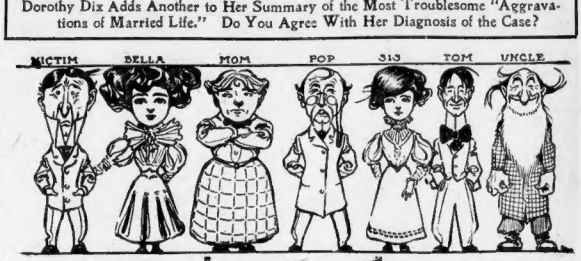
Remember that the most lovable things about you are your sweetness, innocence and purity.

HOW RELATIVES RUIN A HOME

Dorothy Dix Adds Another to Her Summary of the Most Troublesome "Aggravations of Married Life." Do You Agree With Her Diagnosis of the Case?



BY DOROTHY DIX

WHAT is the most aggravating thing in married life?

Is it the wife's relatives?

A host of men, many of whom have been through the divorce courts and others who wished they had the courage to, will respond in the affirmative, and declare that there is nothing that not only causes the little rift within the lute so often, but puts love's whole orchestra out of business so frequently as too much mother-in-law, and papa-in-law, and sister-in-law and brother-in-law.

"If I ever marry again," says a man who is married to his wife's entire family, "if I ever marry again it's a cinch that I'd pick out an orphan, with no known relatives. My wife is a peach, and if she'd been the only one in the basket I should have gotten the prize package in the matrimonial lottery.

"Alas, however, she was one of many, and instead of getting one I got them all. Matrimony is all right, but I'm too much married for a man of my simple and unostentatious tastes.

Annexed Whole Family

"BEFORE we were married, when I used to go to Bella's house and see the happy family cluster around the evening lamp, I sort of had a premonition that maybe I was going up against a whole lot, but in my ignorance and inexperience I thought I could cut Bella out of the herd, and leave the balance at home.

"That's where I was foolish. I've not only annexed Bella, but I've annexed all of her kin, even to Aunt Sally and Uncle Reuben, who live in Squeedunk, and Cousin Irene, who brings the twins and comes from all the way out West to stay in our flat and show us how much she loves us.

"Yes, sir, matrimony is a great thing, and no married man can ever be lonely, for he always has his wife's folks to keep him company. They overflow the spare room and flunk out the parlor couch, and crowd him out at his own table.

"They smoke his cigars, drink up his whiskey, and borrow his clothes just to show that they are sociable. And let him get a few theater tickets, and buy 'em suppers, as a proof that they love him so ill will in taking a dear darling sister away from them.

Run His Affairs

"AND that's not the worst. It seems to me that every fellow is married he is expected to make over his whole character according to his wife's family pattern.

"That's the way it is in my house. Bella is a dear, and if we lived a million miles from her folks, where she couldn't get her family point of view on me, we'd jog along as comfortably as you please. As it is, I am continually treated to what mamma thinks, and what papa thinks, and sister Maud and brother Tom think of my conduct, and it rasps my nerves and causes me to say things that dishonor Bella into tears.

"I'm able to provide a comfortable home in a modest way and put aside something every year as a nest egg, and Bella, who is cheery and industrious, doesn't in the least mind doing her part until she has a visit from mamma.

"Mamma looks at her with tears in her eyes and calls her 'poor dear,' and makes a great parade of helping with the work in our tiny apartment, and then she sniffles and tells about one of Bella's friends who has married a millionaire and keeps three servants, and says that she never thought that her poor dear child would come to do her own cooking.

And the Result

"AND she sniffs at the food at dinner and tells poor Bella how good for me everything is that I hate, and how bad for me everything is that I love, and when I smoke a pipe she throws open the window to escape suffocation, and when I light a cigar she coughs a hollow groan and begins counting up how much money a man could save if he'd only let tobacco alone.

"As a result, when mamma-in-law is enlivening our life with her presence, I stay away from home as much as possible, and then she accuses my dark suspicion in Bella's mind about what I am up to.

"Brother Tom is a loud-talking youth who is a self-constituted authority on sporting topics and considers me slow. This doesn't prevent him from holding me up for small sums that he is always going to hand me' but never does, yet Bella considers me mean when I occasionally brace up and refuse to be touched for a loan.

"She calls him 'her poor brother,' and says it is so unfortunate that he can't get work, and I report that he doesn't need to as long as he can work his brother-in-law, and then she weeps, and says that I'm down on her family, and I'm a mean—boo—hoo old —boo—hoo—thing—boo—hoo.

"And that's the way we go at it, tooth and nail, over Sister Sally and Sister Lou, and Aunt Jerusha, and all the balance of 'em, and that's why I say that the most aggravating thing in matrimony is the wife's relatives. And the divorce statistics bear me out."

Is it so, ladies?

Here is the unfortunate man who is married to the whole family. Do you envy his lot?

Salt moistened with vinegar will remove burnt marks from enamelled saucepans and dishes; but don't forget that they must be soaked in cold water for a few hours first to loosen the stains.

When hanging clothes to dry, first hang up by the tailored part—waist, or belt band, etc.—because if hung by the thinner part the water would run into the thick part, lodge there and take longer to dry. Valuable Pointers for Young Mothers

SEE that the cushions, etc., of baby's carriage are well aired and quite dry before using out. Carriages are often stored in an outhouse or passage, where it is quite possible for them to become slightly damp from one day to the next. When the weather is very cold a small rubber hot water bottle should be placed in the carriage at baby's feet to prevent him from becoming chilled.

Children's Pocket Money

As soon as a child is old enough to ask for a penny to spend for itself, a small weekly allowance should be given, and the child taught to save a portion of it for occasions. No matter how few the pennies, a child should know just how many to expect during the week and on what day. This will teach the value of money—a valuable lesson—and it will also teach the little one how to be generous and self-denying by carefully saving up some of those same cherished pennies for a present for someone else.

Strong tea or coffee is very bad for children. Milk, milk and water, very weak tea or cocoa are far better for growing boys and girls.

To Prevent a Cold

When a bad cold seems on the point of developing give the child a hot bath in front of a fire in the bedroom if it is cold weather; dry with heated towels, and give a final rubbing down with the hands after partaking on them a little eau-de-cologne. Put the little patient at once to bed and let a drink of hot milk or black currant tea—the latter made by pouring half a pint of boiling water on two heaped-up teaspoonfuls of jam or jelly. By the next morning all trace of cold will probably have vanished.

Black currant tea is an excellent cold cure, more especially if the jam or jelly used is home made.

Or The Heart of a Woman"

By Gregory Townsend

Chapter XCVI.—Continued.

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner.

FRANK at once retorted that he was no cousin of his, but an impostor, and pushed him from the grave again. He fell heavily upon the coffin and for a time lay there moaning. Then with an effort he raised himself again and began a piteous appeal.

"Frank, Frank, old boy," said Reginald to Frank's dream, with tears streaming down his cheeks, "don't, for God's sake, bury me here alive! I have been a terrible worry to you, I know, but I wrote and told you I meant to reform, and I will—I will—and share my fortune with you, and—and—I'll give you five—ten—any—I am too young to die the death of a dog at this—"

"You are an imposter," Frank seemed to say, in a voice curiously like and yet another millstone. "Get back into your coffin and lie down in your bed—you have made it. Lie in it." With that Reginald made one final despairing effort, then—relief thought, to escape from the grave.

He threw out his clenched nails and bleeding fingers at the turf, and for a time lay there, merely tearing it with great clods of earth and heavy flint stones that fell rattling on the coffin lid. At last, however, he attained a temporary grip, and then lifting himself on his knees, leaned upon his fingers with heavy sighs and he felt with a fast despairing cry into the yawning grave again.

At that instant a noise as of thunder seemed to split Frank's dream in a new and tangible horror that suddenly froze every drop of blood in his veins.

Filled only a little with earth he found himself in a small room, through the window of which he could see a cold, ghastly effect upon an open coffin in which sat onright a man in grave clothes with blinking eyes muffled to his.

CHAPTER XCVII.

From the Dead

FRANK'S tongue was paralyzed with fear, and his breath came for a moment in convulsive gasps. Was this still a dream? Was he really awake? And if so, why was he here in this chamber of death.

The heavy coffin lid had overturned, and the thing upon the floor, realized the noise that had awakened him, but this corpse, sitting up and blinking at him, could this really be Reginald come to life again? Was such a miracle possible? If so, why couldn't he speak? For his life he could not get a single word through his quivering teeth.

At last the white lips moved, and in a voice that was feeble, but grew more and more familiar to him, the corpse—if it may still be so described—said, in French:

"Where am I?"

Suddenly Frank's tongue was loosened.

"Are you Reginald?" he asked.

"Simeon am I," was the only reply. Then Frank said in French:

"Who are you?"

"Bibi," said he faintly. "Where is Suzanne? I am—all most Dick. Tell her to bring me a bottle of cognac."

All Frank's terror disappeared in an instant. This was not Reginald Bracebridge, and God only knew who he was, but at least here was a man who was long enough to get the truth out of him.

Those were the thoughts as he rushed from the room, bounded up the staircase two steps at a time, ran down the corridor to his bedchamber, seized a glass and a bottle of whisky, and as quickly returned.

To his dismay he found that the man had fallen back in the coffin again and to all appearances was as dead as a stone. Then Frank's nerve broke down once more, and this time, completely unnerved, he fled from the room across the hall and up the stairs, as if the corpse had suddenly leaped from the coffin and were pursuing him. Once again in his bedchamber, he locked the door and threw himself panting and clammy from head to foot with cool perspiration into an easy chair.

Presently his veins began to throb with renewed vigor, a genial glow spread itself over his entire body and his courage returned.

"Well," he said at last, springing to his feet, "of all the infernal nights, of all the accursed experiences, of all the—hang it all, can Bedlam be worse than this? What's the use? What's the use? Where am I? Who am I? Oh! this is unendurable. I'll—I'll—"

ELLEN TERRY'S TRIUMPH IS PERSONAL

Ellen Terry enjoyed a personal triumph last evening at the Hollis Street Theatre, where she reappeared after an absence from Boston of several years. She triumphed not only in her own personality, but in spite of the handicap afforded by a Bernard Shaw play that has nothing but scenery and one or two bright lines to recommend it. "Captain Brassbound's Conversion" was, it is said, written for Miss Terry.

The play is not worth talking about, except that it furnishes a medium for some excellent acting on the part of Miss Terry, Miss Shaw, George Elton and Rudge Harding. These and the others of the cast all from England. George Elton particularly stands out in the cast like a gilt-edged mirror on a dusky warrior. James Shaw's Captain Brassbound was logical, clever and convincing, but, of course, the honors went to Miss Terry.

If everyone did not remember that she was a fitfully positive a short time ago she could easily convince them that she is yet under the half-century mark. Graceful, handsome, gowned in excellent taste, and wielding her lines with wonderfully clear enunciation and with perfect sincerity, she lifted the play out of its atmosphere of personal triumph for herself. It seemed, at one time, as if the audience would never allow her to leave the stage, and she delivered every bit of the applause.

COWBOYS, INDIANS IN WILD WEST PLAY

One does not have to travel West to enjoy the scenes and the life of the cowboys, which is so vividly pictured in Charles E. Blaney's latest thriller, "Young Buffalo, King of the Great Wild West," which has come back to the Grand Opera House for one week's stay. Its first production last evening met with appreciation from those who never tire of seeing a real portrayal of the life of the noble cowboy, contrasted with that of the hard-hearted greaser, also tribe of real Sioux Indians from the Pine Ridge Reservation, whose actions give the play a true western air.

NOVELTY CONGRESS AT THE MUSEUM

The congress of museum novelties was a "big show" at Austin & Stone's yesterday. Biz Frank, mammoth trick horse; Lanette, gymnast; the Robertos, in a mind-reading, amusement feat; Annie Hood, tattooed Venus; Professor J. H. Riley, human dolphin; Tilly's marionettes; the Seven South Band and the big moving picture features. It was a day of extra good shows in the vaudeville theatre. There was a generous welcome to Grace Toledo, who sang "Back to Dear Old Boston."

GREAT ENGLISH ACTRESS RETURNS.

SPARKLING SHOW BY CHAMPAGNE GIRLS

The Champagne Girls showed their effervescence at the Old Howard yesterday. They seem in vein with the other attractions for getting all the sports in town to see them. The opener, "My Neighbor and My Neighbor's Wife," is a roaring farce. Billy Potter and Effie Hartwell, wonderful boy balancers, are of sensational interest. Fields and Wooley had a skit entitled "A Trip in the Airship," which was novel. Elmer Tenley, monologist; the Lavoy brothers, comedy acrobats; Milt Wood, with some new steps; Brennan and Hart, burlesque and vaudeville given at the Palace Theatre this season is that of the Trans-Atlantic Burlesquers and the Palace's own company. The "Tub-Dub Conspiracy" is in two sets, and there is not a moment that the comedians are not creating laughter. The chorus is exceptionally pretty. The olio presents Fennell and Tyson, in a bright sketch; the Rackets, in "Flits in Full Dress"; Mlle. Emerie and Mons. Silvern, in a sensational trapeze novelty; the twin sisters Gaillard.

"CONSPIRACY" ON AT THE PALACE

One of the most varied entertainments of

JUNIE M'CREE IS GREAT HIT AT KEITH'S

Should a person, after having witnessed the bill at Keith's this week, appear at the box office and demand his money back, it is safe to say that he would get it on examination by an alienist. It is hopeful if the noted purveyor of pessimism has ever had his life presented a better, a more entertainment. Junie McCree, as "Bill the Lone Fiend," in a little three-scene skit called "The Man from Denver," has a fine opportunity to present a clever piece of character acting.

One of the big hits of the program is Harry L. Tighe and his six-piece Tar Basque Quartet—three men and one woman—sang superbly from the gallery to the parts of grand opera. A mixture not that has been seen here lately, but a much better show, is the Sensational Double Zavaves." A little later came a real screech travesty on this very act, George H. Reno and company.

'THE SECOND MRS.' IS STILL POPULAR

The Second Mrs. Tanqueray can hardly be called a desirable member of society, but the play which Arthur Pinero has built about her and endowed with her name—well, the reception given it at two performances at the Castle Square Theatre yesterday shows clearly that after several years' absence from the city it is still as popular as ever. The drama is in four acts. The scene is London. The story centres about the second matrimonial venture of Aubrey Tanqueray, a widower, or rather about the woman whom he takes as his second wife. He attempts to foist herself upon her new husband's relatives and intimates are material for a most interesting plot. Hassell Hannel and Miss Thais Lawton did excellent work as Tanqueray and "the second Mrs.," as the other characters are pleased to call her.

Five Plays Are Continued

Five great plays entered upon another week's run in Boston yesterday, and all but two on their final week. Each of these plays will have a special matinee on Friday, Patriots' Day. Here is the list of continued plays:

"Brown of Harvard"

A crowded house welcomed Henry Woodruff at the Majestic Theatre last night when he entered upon the last fortnight of his season's stay in "Brown of Harvard." A special event is scheduled for Thursday when the ladies who appear at the box office, dressed in brown, will be admitted to the theatre free and supplied with the best seats in the house.

"Coming Thro' the Rye"

"Coming Thro' the Rye," the delightful musical comedy which is now filling the big Boston Theatre at every performance, has evidently come to stay. No limit to the present engagement has been announced.

"Strongheart"

Robert Edeson began his farewell week in America with "Strongheart" at the Park Theatre. On account of the change in orders which have been received it will be necessary for him to sail at once so as to give the play in London.

"45 Minutes From Broadway"

Fay Templeton's second and last week in "45 Minutes From Broadway" opened at the Colonial Theatre last evening, and as the popular comedienne last week made the strongest hit she would retire from the stage at the end of the present season. Realizing the beginning of Lee Savoy's opportunities that Bostonians will have a seeing the artiste who has made so many deserved successes here.

"The Girl in White"

At the Tremont Theatre last night Harry Morris's new play, "The Girl in White," began the last week of its engagement in Boston. Pauline Frederick in the title role fully justifies all the good things that have been said about her.

BUSY IZZY'S VACATION PROVES TO BE STRENUOUS

Busy Izzy's strenuous vacation days, blurred at a few times, like explanatory notes, New York furnished the background for the first act, but instead of the cafe furnished the foundation of a lively summary. New York stage characters there were some cowboys, Summers girls and over-season, with George Sidney the pivotal dressed exceptionally. When the scene point around which a half-dozen amusingly shifts to California the stage is filled with good comedians disported themselves. The New York beauties that fairly dazzle the eyes more than that was found. Of course Bill native. There is no scarcity of pretty George Sidney was the "big game," and girls in the show, but it seems unfair to is grateful if ever did better work. His fun was of that easy-going, good-natured make a half-dozen do all the work, kind of which he is master. The plot did where the others seemed fully competent to not bother anyone very much, but was suitable for more than was given form.

MAY BELMONT IS ONE BEST BET

CHARLOTTE HUNT GETS ENCORES

Mae Belmont, formerly one of the stars in the Lyric company at the Howard Theatre, is now one of the owners with the Tighe Lillies at the Columbia Theatre this week, in both farces, "A Temporary Husband," and "The Goddess of the Moon," she is very pretty, and in the olio she is the big star by reason of her singing and dancing. George H. Murphy, the German dialect comedian, is one big scream-maker of the actors. Tonight the wrestling bout will be between Atlas of St. Louis and Lundin, and on Thursday night the amateur session will be held instead of on Friday.

GREAT VAUDEVILLE IN LYCEUM SHOW

Seven vaudeville acts, some of more than ordinary quality, and a burlesque sketch much different and far better than most of its kind, go to make the performance presented by the Behman show and Frank D. Bryan's "Congress of American Girls" one of the best that has been seen at the Lyceum Theatre this season. The "Cyclone Six" and the Masqued Ladies' Quintet are extraordinarily good, while Martin's Minoan girls are a combination that is worthy of the best musical comedy. They do great stunts in dancing.

GRENADIERS HEAD BIG BILL

Very few vaudeville acts carry as much flagree work as does "The Resoning Grenadiers," an English act, in which eight men and one woman do some clever imitations, and which made its first bow to a Boston audience at the Orpheum last night. The act is very well mounted. Meredith Merwin, good looking and in good voice, is the warbling.

George Evans and his black-face foolishness get more applause than anything else in the bill. He has a new song hit, "When My Ship Comes In." Reidy and Carter, billed as "the most refined singing duo in vaudeville, tried hard to live up to this idea of fame's trumpet. He was a large, refined gentleman, and she was a small, refined lady, and to those who like their refinement spread on thick this particular adjustment of refinement ought to be welcome. The rest of the bill was entertaining. Some new songs and some newly adapted sheep and some literature in moss agate-proof safe notewortily.

PICTURES AT THE LYRIC.

The Lyric offers an excellent programme of motion pictures and illustrated songs. The "Anarchy of Paris" is worthy of special mention. Miss Powers and Dorothy Murdock sing the illustrated songs. Fred Gardner, Miss Chase and Miss Walters render the instrumental numbers. The impersonators are Lombard and Gardner.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

EVERYBODY IS TALKING BASEBALL TO-DAY---NO WONDER, ISN'T THIS THE PILGRIMS' FIRST HOME GAME?

SEASON IS OPENED TOO EARLY, LAVE CROSS SAYS

Joe Cantillon, the former Milwaukee manager, who is now in charge of the Senators' forces, is certainly popular with his men. They declare to a man that he is the "best ever," and that they will try their hardest to win a good position in the American League race this season.

The Washington team and the other pompous Joe arrived at the Copley Square Hotel early to-day. Among those who arrived were the ever-the-same Lave Cross, formed captain of the Athletics, who looks as young as ever, despite the fact that he will be forty years old next month; Charley Hickman, who formerly played here with the Pilgrims, but who was released to pitch here; John Anderson, the former star of the Highlanders and others equally popular.

Few New Payers.

There are only four new payers on the Senators' roster. They are Gasley, formerly of the Pirates; Perrine, who plays shortstop, late of Kansas City, and Blankenship, catcher, and Graham, a southpaw pitcher, of the California League.

Lave Cross, who has stayed in the national pastime for twenty-two years, said to-day:

"I think that April 11 is much too early to start the season. April 21 is plenty of time to open up, and I think that next year the millionaires will decide on a later inauguration. When our team was in the South we were in good shape, but as soon as we hit the cold weather of the North it rather impaired the condition of the men. Three weeks of training in the South, one of which is equal to four here, and the other two in practice games, I think is plenty for any team.

"If I had the management of a team, I would send the pitchers and catchers to the Hot Springs a week or ten days ahead of the rest of the squads, and have them join the team when the exhibition games were on. It takes the hitters longer to get the soreness out of their arms than the rest of the men, and for that reason they need more time than the earlier start. More over, I would not let the players do any practicing in the morning hours and especially in the afternoon of home and exhibition games. Let them save their energies for the afternoon struggle.

Collins Meets Cross.

Jimmy Collins, the third baseman of the Bostons, and Lave Cross, who by the way is covering the third sack for the Senators with his old-time skill, met in the lobby of the hotel this morning, and had a fanning bee. Both of these men are former leaders of championship teams, and they had pleasant remembrances of things past in the baseball world.

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

With the kind permission of the weather man, there will be great baseball doings at the Huntington avenue grounds this afternoon, when the famous Boston Americans line up against the Washington team. It will be the first game of the year in Boston for American League clubs. The Nationals had their opening last week in bad weather, just a fine crowd was out to welcome Mr. Dovey's team. This afternoon there will be another large assemblage to greet the old warriors who have been on the roads hereabouts. The conditions of the roads between the two cities was much better than Mr. Spaulding dared anticipated, and the players had a good run from bond, although somewhat rusty in spots, especially between Spencer and Palmer.

Alfred Reeves, general manager of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association, says that although some automobile manufacturers are disinclined to encourage the 1907 tour of the American Automobile Association, the members of the A. M. C. M. A. are in favor of the tour almost as a unit. He declares the "independents" believe that the public is entitled to know just what the quality of cars and their ability to negotiate long tours, and they believe further that such affairs as the A. A. A. endorses are for the general good of the touring and industry. These makers argue that there are still some people who believe automobiles is a source of trouble and is not outside of breakdowns, and a driver is by easy stages from New York. Mr. Spaulding left the great city on Sunday afternoon, making an easy and speedy run to Hartford, where he spent the night. Yesterday morning he left Hartford and reached Boston before noon. The new car seems to possess no end of speed and power, and will make somewhat of a sensation when seen on the roads hereabouts.

NON-STOP ENGINE TEST FOR THE AEROCAR PLANNED

BY. J. C. KERRISON.

The Aerocar people, satisfied with the excellent run of that car from New York to Boston during the week of the Boston exhibit, is proving to them the thorough efficiency and reliability of the car to do the great work under most exacting circumstances, are now arranging for a second test. Manager George H. Lowe of the Boston office said this morning that arrangements had been completed whereby a non-stop engine run from New York to Boston will be made on Tuesday next. The start will be made at 1 o'clock that morning, and the finish should be in Boston about 4 o'clock that afternoon. This will be the first non-stop engine run between the two cities held this year. Others are today to come later.

Leon Spaulding brought his new Roebot to Boston yesterday, driving it by easy stages from New York. Mr. Spaulding left the great city on Sunday afternoon, making an easy and speedy run to Hartford, where he spent the night. Yesterday morning he left Hartford and reached Boston before noon. The new car seems to possess no end of speed and power, and will make somewhat of a sensation when

SCHRECK PUT WILLE OUT IN THE NINETEENTH

TONOPAH, Nev., April 15.—Mike Schreck of Cincinnati knocked John Wille of Chicago out in the nineteenth round of their finish battle here. The fight was one of the fastest that has ever been seen in the Sage Brush State, and time without number it seemed as if one man or the other would be knocked out, but just when the end seemed near a brilliant rally would turn the tide and make the aggressor cover up to save himself.

The fact that the men were forced to wear five-ounce gloves, the only kind that could be found in the town, was the reason the battle went so far into the night. Wille seemed the stronger at the start, and along toward the middle of the bout looked like a winner, but Schreck came along fast with his second wind and gave one of the finest exhibitions of cleverness that has ever been seen here.

In the nineteenth round Wille rushed to land a hard right to the head. Schreck was fighting coolly, boxing constantly with his right foot forward and swinging the left in the clinches. This was the main punch with which Wille did seem to be able to solve. Wille landed a hard left to the head, but Schreck came right back with a fusillade of lefts and rights to the head. In a clinch Wille landed a left a little low. This made Schreck furious, and he landed a left and right, dropping Wille, who stayed down to the count of seven. He got up groggy, and Schreck, with a final rush, landed lefts and rights, dropping Wille again, who that time was counted out by Referee Otto Floto. The final blow was a right delivered right in the head.

Floto announced Schreck the winner on the best two-out-of-three falls, and expressed in his long career as pugilistic manager, promoter and critic twice brought the world's championship to Boston within the past four years.

The management has been busy for a long time preparing for the opening day, and everything is now ready. One thousand handsome invitations have been issued, and there will be all kinds of prominent personages on hand to grace the occasion. Governor Guild, who would not miss a baseball opening for all kinds of money, will have a front row seat in the grandstand, near Mayor Fitzgerald, who is a baseball fan from the ground up. His Honor will toss out the first ball. Lieutenant-Governor Draper will be to the

A few minutes before 2:30 o'clock there will be the customary flag raising, the two teams parading to the flag pole for the purpose. Then the Washington team will take the field for warming up purposes. The Boston team will follow. Then the Mayor will toss out the ball and the real fun will begin.

There will be an early gathering of the fans, first for the purpose of getting the best seats and second to see the new men the Boston team has gathered about which so much has been written this Spring. The fans will want to have a peek at Young, Donnie Sullivan, the fast outfielder, and they will want to size up the first base play of Unglaub, whom we had with us two years ago as utility man. Reports have had it that Hobert is playing a great game at the initial bag, and of course the Boston fans want to look him over carefully and compare him with themselves, whom Unglaub has replaced, and old Candy Lachance, the first baseman of two years ago.

New Pitchers to Be Seen.

Then there are the new pitchers to be seen. Oberlin was with the team last Fall, but Boston hardly had a look at him, for he is a brand new man. Everybody will have eyes on little Wagner, who is filling Parent's shoes at shortstop. At fielding the little fellow is doing great stunts, but with the bat he has not yet shown to advantage. The old-timers like "Uncle Cy" Young, Dineen, Tannehill, Collins, Ferris Freeman and others will be heartily cheered. All hands will wear the new white uniforms for the first time.

The Boston team arrived early this morning from Philadelphia. They went immediately to their hotels, some to the Langham and some to the Copley Square, and the first thing they did after breakfast was to go to bed. Most of them have put in the last three nights on sleeping cars and needed more rest.

The Washington team also got in early and went to the Copley Square Hotel, where most of the visiting baseball teams will put up. The Senators always play a lively game early in the season and they felt confident of trimming the Bostons. "Uncle Cy" will undoubtedly do the twirling in the game this afternoon, with the reliable Criger to catch him.

Look! Who's Here!

By Morton Birge.

Oh! Look who's here! Well, bless my eye! It begs ain't ancient Uncle Cy,
Who makes the Oaler theory seem a paramaka's frenzied dream.
And look! Here's Criger. Ah, there, Lou! And Hoey, too. Here's luck to you.
And Jimmy Collins. Well, it seems right good again to see you, Jeems.
And Bill Dinneen and all the rest. Say, p'raps it ain't no merry jest
To size the Pilgrims up this year and then to holler: "Look! Who's here!"

How 'bout it, boys? The season past we played a backward game so fast
That no one else could keep the pace we set to clinch the lowest place.
As Pilgrims we piled right along, but not until we'd started wrong.
But never mind. That story's old. We'll start before our feet are cold
And play so when the season's o'er we'll point in triumph to the score,
Up at the top or somewhere near, and say: "Hey, Look it! Look who's here!"

PHILADELPHIA, April 16.—After winning two games from the Brooklyns, the Boston Nationals arrived here to-day for a series with the Quakers, when will be the opening games of the season away from home for the Hubites.

The Doves looked to be in tip-top shape when they alighted from the train, and every man is confident of winning a majority of the battles from the locals, who, by the way, are going some these days.

Dorner is carded to go in the box for the visitors and Corridon for the Phillies.

It was cloudy and threatened to rain at any moment this morning.

NATIONAL GAME NOTES.

* * *

There was not a happier man than the new owner. His team made good at the outset and that was enough.

* * *

Pretty good pitching seen at the South End so far this year. The hits have been few and far between.

* * *

Patsy Donovan has got a winner in that young south-paw, Rucker, and he will be heard from before the season is advanced far.

* * *

Inside ball is a predominating feature of the Nationals' playing which is always on tap. Brains come in handy in the sport.

* * *

Pitcher Pfeffer and "Little Cy" Young are leading the team with the stick. The other members of the team will have to get busy if they want to figure.

* * *

* * *

When Del Howard makes a double play from left on a sprinter like Maloney he is showing speed all right. It was a play worthy of the applause it received.

* * *

Dave Brain is up to his old tricks of fooling them off. He must have sent over a dozen balls sailing in the fifth before he hit into the diamond.

* * *

Charley Lewis went to his home in Plattsburg, N. Y. over Sunday and was met expected back in time for the game. He came though and his playing showed the value placed on his services. His pickups and throws were better than anything seen from him last year.

* * *

But speaking of shortstops, how about Al Bridwell? The way he got them back of his position and slammed them across to Tenney was pleasing to look at.

* * *

Big Pfeffer proved that he could field his position a bit when he knocked down a scathing liner to the ground with his glove and relayed the ball to Tenney.

* * *

Captain Tenney was the only one to go down twice on strikes, and he was all at sea trying to connect with Rucker the first and second times up.

* * *

Ritchey tried the squeeze play and got away with it as the time was ripe. Rucker was up in the air and pitched a wide one, making it easy for Claude

* * *

A fan on the first base bleachers with a foghorn voice kept things going lively. He was coaching every player who got on base.

* * *

Brooklyn should never have got its first run. Tenney threw high to second on a nice stop and pass of Pfeffer, and failed to get the runner. Then came a two-bagger, and the deed was done.

* * *

It looked bad in the eighth, when Rucker led off with a single and Maloney followed suit.

* * *

Brain took a bunt and passed to Bridwell, covering third, forcing a man, and Howard worked his double play on a fly to second, and it was practically all over.

* * *

Guess Pfeffer is going some when he can hold a team down to three appearances down to three hits with a total of four.

YALE BEATS WESLEYAN.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., April 16.—Yale defeated Wesleyan by the score of 6 to 0. The Yale team played consistently. Captain Kinney making the only error, but the work of the visitors was ragged.

CARROLL WILL MEET CONNOLLY

Johnny Carroll of New York, who is to box Bartley Connolly of Portland at Lynn next Wednesday night, arrived in Gotham on the midnight to-day and he on hand to weigh in.

Local ring fans realize that this bout will be one of the fiercest that has taken place for some time, as both men are known for their aggressive tactics and terrific punching.

Several will go down from the Hub to witness the match as they know the caliber of Carroll, having seen him defeat Fred Bradley decisively at Chelsea, and Connolly is a tough fighter to knock out all over New England.

It will be a match between two willing mit jammers who have reputations as hitters, and will hand out some steamy wallops when the bell rings.

LUNDIN MEETS ATLAS TO-NIGHT

Tickets have been selling like hot cakes for the big wrestling bout at the Columbia Theatre to-night between Atlas, the clever St. Louis wrestler, and Lundin, whose work is known to every follower-of "mat" doings in the city. The men met once before, but after tussling for two hours neither was able to secure a fall, so the question of supremacy was left unsettled. Manager Farren announces that the match to-night will last until one or the other of the wrestlers is returned a winner. Both men are in good shape, and ready to put up the bout of their life.

Whipping the Piano Trust

The Trust hasn't recovered yet from the terrible body blows we've given it in the organized body snatching of late. The biggest piano making concern in the East was a big victory for us. Why—we got it in the bargain for only seven new upright pianos of one of the most famous piano makers in the East. These pianos are listed to sell at $425 each to investigate! Two weeks ago we made them an offer that made the makers look with pride on. Monday morning we posted an offer from this maker of the full retail price on every one of the twenty-seven of his pianos we would sell at cost to us to keep up to the public at our store. It was a go—but as an act we would refuse to let them have the benefit of the advertising that would result if we made a special exercise at prices that would be so low that we were losing our faith with the people in our fight. We will give them the advantage of part one of our victories over the Trust and will expect to investigate! Two weeks ago we made them an offer that made the makers look with pride on. Thomas Jefferson's Ten Rules

Not All NEW, but ALL of Them Wise

On Saturday last, various assortments of citizens celebrated the birthday of Thomas Jefferson—some of the "patriots" that talked in the name of Jefferson would have made that wise, red-haired, old gentleman smile cynically at least. But if a cat can look at a king, a corporation lawyer can quote Jefferson.

Many wise sayings, speeches and letters have come down to us from the man who wrote the Declaration of Independence, and who really BELIEVED what the Declaration of Independence says.

Out of these writings of Jefferson ten rules have been collected. They are worthy the attention and thought of all our readers.

They are short. Here they are:

1. Never put off until to-morrow what you can do to-day.
2. Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.
3. Never spend your money before you have earned it.
4. Never buy what you don't want because it is cheap.
5. Pride costs more than hunger, thirst and cold.
6. We seldom repent of eating too little.
7. Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.
8. How much pain the evils have cost us that have never happened.
9. Take things always by the smooth handle.
10. When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, count a hundred.

Some of these sayings will strike you as very old, and lacking in novelty. But, old as these rules are, human beings have not yet learned to follow them. And they won't learn for many a long year.

We shall not moralize about them all to-day, only one or two we want to emphasize.

"Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly."

That saying of Jefferson's we recommend to all young men and women engaged in earning a living.

If you work willingly, if you make yourself realize that willing effort is easy, AND THE ONLY KIND THAT MAKES YOU GROW AND SUCCEED, you will solve one of your big working problems.

Did you ever see a small boy walking ahead of a band, with the music playing?

And did you ever see the same small boy walking half the distance to get a newspaper for his father? Walking with the band rests him, it doesn't tire him at all, BECAUSE HE DOES IT WILLINGLY. And the other kind of walking takes the very heart out of him, and makes him almost too tired to eat his dinner.

It is exactly that way with all the work we do in this world. When you do things willingly, with the heart and the nerves and the brain acting with one another cheerfully, work is easy, AND SUCCESS FOLLOWS.

A willing FOOL may lag behind an unwilling man of intelligence. But even a willing fool is happier in the end than an unwilling one, and all things being even, the employe working WILLINGLY will cease being an employe and have others working for him sooner than the other man.

This applies to all kinds of foolish vanity. It applies to the young man who never does anything, BECAUSE HE IS TOO PROUD TO DO WHAT HE HAS THE CHANCE TO DO.

It applies to men and women who squander on dress and in show the money that they need for more serious purposes.

It applies to those that in old age have no money saved up, BECAUSE PRIDE SPENT THEIR MONEY AS FAST AS THEY GOT IT.

The pride that keeps men honest, the pride that makes men truthful, never kept a man back or hurt him.

The bad kind of pride is the pride which can be described as "the coward's pride." Men are foolishly and cowardly proud BECAUSE THEY ARE AFRAID OF WHAT OTHER MEN WILL THINK. Money that they cannot afford they spend helping other men to drink too much, BECAUSE THEY ARE ASHAMED TO BE THOUGHT STINGY OR MEAN.

Self-respect is one thing; foolish pride, vanity, moral cowardice, are very different. Get rid of them.

All the advice from these ten rules is good advice. The man who can keep his temper while he thinks—whether he count ten or a million—is a lucky man.

A man in a rage is a man whose BRAIN IS NO LONGER WORKING. And the man whose brain isn't working is at the mercy of the man whose brain IS working.

Worry about FUTURE troubles is a curse with many men. It prevents their working well TO-DAY.

Read these Jefferson rules over, and moralize on them for yourselves, for your children.

Why Lodge Fears the People

He Thinks They Might Vote to Elect Their Senators Themselves—AND THEN HE WOULD LOSE HIS JOB.

United States Senator Lodge honored the Massachusetts State House with his presence last week. It was said that he went there to whip the Republican Senators and Representatives into line to kill the Public Opinion bill.

In other words Lodge, THE BOSS, was exerting his power to prevent the people of the State from having a chance to express their opinions by ballot on public questions.

Lodge, like all other bosses, FEARS the voice of the people.

He believes that the Public Opinion bill is a step toward the old conditions in Massachusetts when the voters had the power not only to express their opinions by ballot, but also to INSTRUCT THEIR REPRESENTATIVES HOW TO VOTE.

In those days, there were no boses, like Lodge.

In those days, the PEOPLE ruled.

Those were the days shortly after the DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE was signed, when men like John Hancock, Sam Adams, James Sullivan, James Otis, Thomas Cushing and Caleb Davis were representatives OF THE PEOPLE and RECEIVED INSTRUCTIONS from the people.

No wonder Lodge fights to prevent the voice of the people from being heard again.

He knows that if the voters had the power to express their opinions by ballot NOW they would vote in favor of the election of United States Senators by the people.

He knows, too, that if Senators were elected by the people, instead of by a corporation-guided and boss-ruled Legislature, HE, LODGE, COULD NOT GO BACK TO WASHINGTON.

She Asks What Would Happen If Women Ceased Their Efforts to Make Themselves Beautiful

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE Lyceum Club of London, a fashionable woman's club, has published in a recent number of its magazine, The Lyceum, a list of topics which will be discussed during the next year.

Among these topics occur the following:

"That the present custom among women for the improvement of the appearance has a tendency to insincerity and the deterioration of the national character."

It would be interesting to hear this subject discussed, and it would be necessary to give the affirmative side to the very young members and the negative to those who are fighting the great thief, Time, in his malicious efforts to rob them of their personal charms.

That is in every century the most violent and persistent battle fought.

The army fighting this battle refills its ranks with each generation; there is never a vacancy, and all the combatants are volunteers.

What Might Happen

IF women should all be converted to the belief that it was wrong to wage this battle and that no effort should be made to arrest the ravages of Time, what would happen?

If nothing false, nothing fictitious took the place of nature's worn-out gifts and charms, first of all we would have a world filled with dyspeptics. The teeth nature supplies are frequently the first of the personal charms to go. Nothing is more beautiful than two rows of perfect teeth, and nothing is more necessary to good digestion.

But if the Lyceum Club declares artificial teeth are destroying the sincerity of the race, and if women are convinced of the statement, then we must increase our preparations of bottled foods for infants, and many a woman on the sunny side of thirty must go toothless through the world, and she must smile her old baby smile, showing toothless gums, all in the interests of sincerity.

His Occupation Gone

THE optician, too, must haul in his sign.

Eyeglasses are insincere.

They pretend to a vision which is not nature's own.

A woman who has failing sight must squint along life's pathway or buy a dog and a chain and a cane.

To look through false appliances is helping the race to deteriorate.

Truth, and nothing but the truth according to the Lyceum, demands the abolition of eyeglasses.

The "switch" and the cunning bunch of curls tucked under the hat must go, one cares to help humanity, be sold at the hairdresser.

But even to sell them back to the promoter of insincerity would be wrong, because they might be purchased by some other mistaken soul.

But at all events the puff or braid or curl which helps to build out the scanty coiffure and to sustain the hat must be sacrificed in the interests of the race.

Her Crowning Glory

THE glory of woman is in her hair, the Bible says. Nor does it say that this hair must grow on her head. The woman who pays a large price for a "naturally waving pompadour" is surely privileged to call it "her hair" and "her glory" if she wishes.

But the Lyceum Club goes to the root of things.

It goes to the roots of woman's hair and asks if it grows on her scalp or is pinned on.

Scant hair and bald spots would have made Helen of Troy a fright.

A bald man is frequently handsome and fascinating.

The Bible never said that a man's glory was in his hair; and when one man paraded his long locks he was promptly punished by a siren with shears.

But a woman whose scalp shows more plainly than her hair is an offence to the eye. If time, sickness or nature has deprived her of enough of woman's glory to cover her scalp it seems her duty to supply the deficiency.

Difficult Ideals

NOT so, says The Lyceum, perhaps, when this momentous subject is decided, but "for the sake of a country to look, for the sake of the salvation of the national character, let your scalp gleam in the sunlight, oh, woman, and let your baldness be known."

Then there is the complexion. If time begins to rob it of vitality and bloom, any attempt to restore its texture and revive its radiance by "skin foods" and "massage" and "vibrator" would surely be wicked, according to this London idea.

Surely this is a momentous question, and all womankind waits trembling for the decision.

GROWING PAINS

By James J. Montague

American corporations are not bad—they are merely suffering from the growing pains of youth.—J. P. Morgan.

I'VE always rather wondered why I had to pay too much
For everything I wore or ate, like trousers, pie and such.
I've always been quite curious to understand the reason
That I am robbed by various trusts, both in and out of season.
And yet the answer's simple, though it fogged my muddled brains—
It's merely that the half-grown trust have all got growing pains.

FOR instance, when the Gas Trust feels a set of tweaks and twinges
Proceedings from the region of its sundry joints and hinges,
It has to take some measures the disturbing pains to still,
And so it adds six-fifty to my long outstanding bill.
By this ingenious method, which is followed on the spot,
It thus transfers the pain to me, which really helps a lot.

WHEN I am mashed in railroad wrecks, pray let no person scoff,
The thing has got so common that the novelty's worn off.
I judge the railroad's growing pains are running up its spine.
And it seeks out the quickest cure by substituting mine.
I'm not at all malicious, yet I hope that railroad had
A session of "growitis" that was really pretty bad.

IT'S comforting, of course, to know the reason that the trusts
Compel us common citizens to share with them our crusts;
And yet a dark suspicion has been flitting through my brain
Since I read of this theory concerning growing pain.
If present robberies are caused by youthful twinge or crick,
What won't the trusts turn loose on us if they get really sick
